THE 1951 HI-O-HI

the vague title given to our athletic teams, a mascot for Oberlin.

Modelled after the Yeomen of the Guard, personal escorts to the King, Obie is here to escort you, the reader, through the pages of the 1951 Hi-O-Hi.

The purpose of a yearbook is to tell the story of the year at the college. So rather than a formal catalog of names, you will find an emphasis on the story behind the year. Our introductory feature section has tried to give a rounded view of this by eight opinions, taken from all types of the college group, and selected for their diversity. The rest of the Hi-O-Hi is devoted to telling in informal picture style the story of 1950-1951 at Oberlin College.

First Prize in Typically Oberlin Contest . . . Sharman Hummel

In a search for one photograph which would embody the concept of Oberlin College, the Hi-O-Hi held a contest for the photograph that was most Typically Oberlin. Out of the forty photos submitted, the picture above was judged the winner by Paul Arnold, instructor in Fine Arts, Andrew Stofan, professional photographer, and Tony Armer, Hi-O-Hi editor.

VIEWS OF OBERLIN

Section Editor, Joan Levin

We editors know everybody in Oberlin, but we forget that they come from different corners of campus. We've called on a few of them, and though we should have liked to blue-pencil some of their views, here they are.

Well Adjusted Prof. Confronts Classes With Equanimity, Cloud

By Frank Ebersole

Though I have become wonderfully accommodated to Oberlin, I still remember that, before my adjustment was complete, these things impressed me: I discovered that the things at Gibson's really do taste just like they look. Oberlin students are never interested in whether a statement is true; they are only interested in what faculty member said it. The faculty is subdivided into departments, the departments into ranks. Within any rank within one department an ordering is arrived at by subject is. Lectures and "research" are the thing. Although as an Oberlin faculty member I have few moral decisions of moment to make, I will always act as if I could confront any situation with equanimity and perfect rationality. I will always have the answer. I will never recommend any change in the Oberlin method of education. I will remember that when you turn an endowed college upside down, the money falls out.

I knew that I was well adjusted when I started to notice that I was preceded into the lecture room by a pillar of cloud.

Student Finds New Experiences Offer "Broadening" Influence

By Miriam Wunderly

One of the most valuable aspects of Oberlin has been the opportunity to get outside my cultural framework, to regard life from another's point of view, and to try to correlate this with material in the books. It has been more than the "novelty" broadening of Oberlin which is valuable—that is, the finding of new aspects and then being pleased with what we've found. It is more than just meeting students from China, India, or Germany, or due democratic process and numbers are assigned. After I had been in Oberlin a few months, I used to dream every night of a push-me-pull-you climbing a mountain. He would frighten me by transforming into pairs of faculty members.

These are some of the difficult-to-verbalize attitudes: When conversing with colleagues I will not talk about his subject or mine; football and baseball are good in season. I will be proud of the high intelligence of my students—and treat them like morons. A student who calls my attention to a slip is un-Oberlin. If I should almost make a mistake, then my glasses are dirty and my notes were hard to see. I will not so much teach my subject as to teach how fine, how beautiful, how important my

Varied Atmosphere Has Social, Intellectual Climates For All

By Stephen Gendzier

From highly successful high school shells we all emerged, seeking life in a liberal arts college. Seeking is too strong a word. We were pushed from our provincial settings where all our actions were meek compared to the new life of tension and insecurity. Immediately we victims of the academic life assumed exclusive poses. In attempting to find a schedule we chose the group that was best suited to our ulterior motives. The soul-searchers of the Mermaid Tavern variety found their answer with the aid of knowing professors and the letting of emotions while seeking; Joe-athlete had his girl, the big game, and the Saturday dance; the Presti crowd jostled around, tossed off a few witty tidbits and gave each other confidence by friendly pokes and knowing eyes; others had their television set, hello-friendships, bridge games, labor songs, and other forms of amusement best in accord with the individual's tradition. Some managed to develop critical eyes that remained the one constant in their otherwise fluid existence. But most of us discussed for four years how much money to spend on formals, whether the Lord is one or three, and whether labor was getting an even break. One test of the effectiveness of liberal arts programs is the social leadership it provides. When our society passes McCarren Acts and ROTC college programs in the name of the academic tradition and democracy, it is time either for a revolt, a migration, or a trip to the psychiatrist.

Housemother Believes Students Unsophisticated — Too Serious

By Mrs. Maude Warner

In his processing, the Oberlin student experiences many painful changes in his thinking, but he would not be a typical student if he remained unchallenged and unmoving. There always seem to be crusaders and causes on the campus. At present the subject is Open House Open Door versus Closed House Closed Door, or something like that. The campus is busy with students who must rush from one important meeting to another. Bike brigades fly between the libe and Peters, dorms and Snack Bar, Conservatory and launderateria. Citizens shudder at the whizzing wheels so close, but take danger in their stride.

Strangers in Oberlin have one distinct memory of their visit. "Never have I seen so many bicycles on a college campus."

Oberlin students are not sophisticated. Neither are they "hill-billies." Their lives seem to run on the theory "Let me alone to manage myself. If I don't get enough sleep, eventually I'll suffer and then I'll do something about it." Students are casual in dress, manners, and speech, but sometimes we wonder if casual and careless are synonyms, informal and well-mannered antonyms. Students, however, can measure up when the situation demands it.

Academic work is taken seriously. Students work and worry. Grades are too important. They may not have time left to learn to think, evaluate, or develop themselves into more versatile personalities.

Lumps, Bumps Worth Trouble, Says Athlete in Retrospect

By Peter Loveland

Somehow dorm acquaintanceships and Snack Bar conversations just don't measure up to locker-room comradeship and the teamwork of inter-collegiate competition. Those of us who have taken part in Oberlin sports are proud of our sturdy Oberlin tradition, which keeps our athletics a game and not a business. Looking back on four years of sports participation and steady spectator interest, I feel more assuredly that the time devoted to athletics has more than its share of treasured college memories. It was worth the early return to school and the long practices. Even the hours being taped on the trainer's bench, or the painful, limping treks to the hospital to have a split nose clipped together or a charleyhorse treated are remembered with a smile.

At the same time, memories flash back of slapstick train trips to Colorado or New York. And all hail the exploits of the low-flying Green Spleen. Unforgettable are the cold shoulders of the opponents' loyal co-eds, and the silence in the stands after a victory at another school, or the jubilant cries at home.

Con Student Underlines Varied Effects of Specialized Course

By Doris Snyder

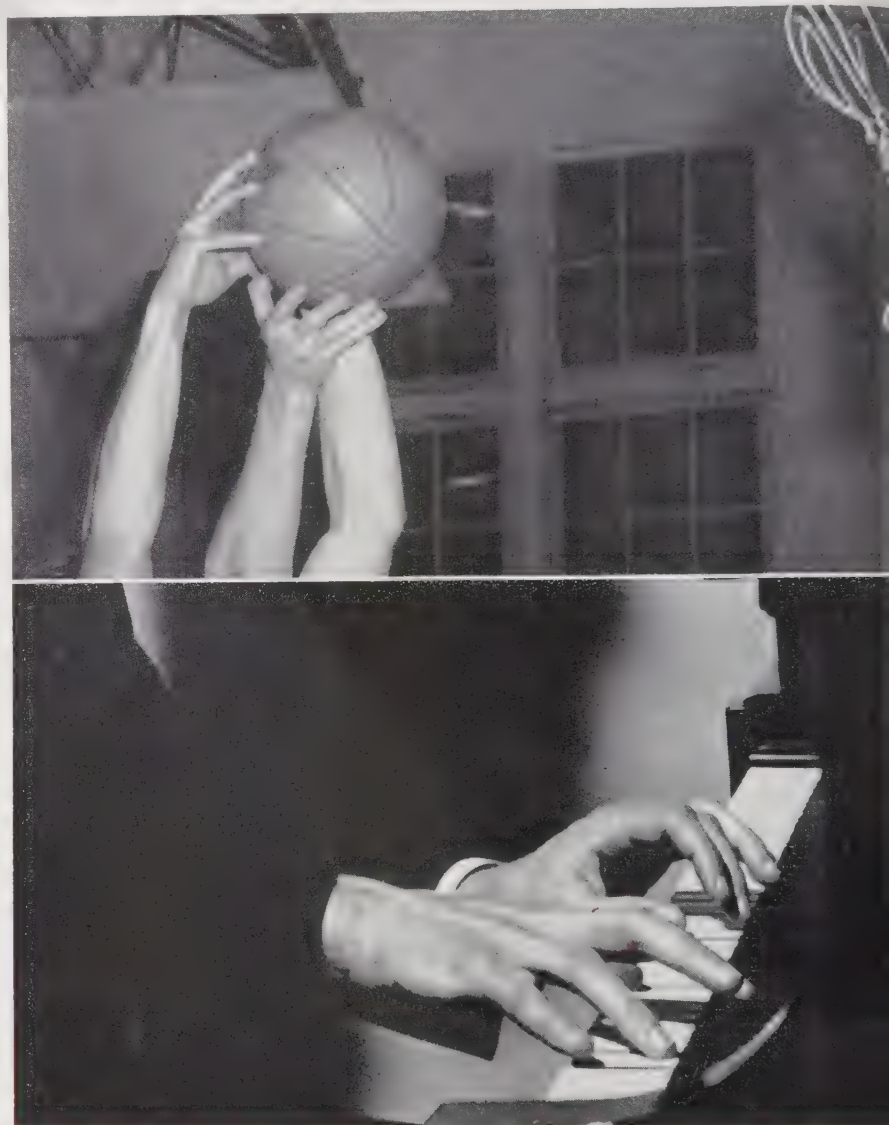

Being a Conservatory student affords a sense of accomplishment and of having more than just scratched the surface. The general knowledge acquired from exposure to many aspects of music begins to fit well into the special pattern of major interest.

On the Con steps the common gripes are not so frequently about bluebooks and papers, but more often, keen disappointment over a "bad lesson" or a difficult assignment. Often our woes are temporarily dissolved over a cup of coffee, panacea of the self-assigned music critic. Even in leisure the

Then there are the nights before the contest, when the race is planned and sweated-out in your dreams. Again and again your mind reviews the plays, wonders what shape the field will be in, whether for the first time the pre-game training meal will feature something for dessert besides fruit cocktail.

No bluebook A or clever seminar report ever gave most of us the thrill comparable to the sincere student cry of "Good race, fella." Oberlin sports worth it? You bet!

Split noses and fruit cocktail may be background to athletics, but they are secondary to the split-seconds of action.

Four years of concentrated work in the Conservatory lead to the development of specialties, as these hands reveal.

Con student will be tapping or humming the No. 1 Symphony of his classical Hit Parade. Music is the bulk of his diet, with a few scattered college subjects thrown in.

Perhaps the biggest criticism of concentrated application to our art rests in the enjoyment sacrificed for technical surveyal and acquisition of pertinent data; we learn to listen, but sometimes forget to relax.

Disinterest: Disfranchisement— Student Lot in Campus Politics

By Marlowe Anderson

you graduate, we try to bring some of its problems to you now. But you must tell us about your blue-books, your papers, your assignments. And you marvel "I don't see how you find time for . . ." In the end, we who want to talk over the state of the nation and the world with you must talk to ourselves. And we talk about the state of the student's mind, too—when does he become a citizen, even a citizen of the college? Until you wake up to responsibility — thy fate, mediocrity; thy place, obscurity.

By Robert Hanson

Because of a critical world situation that necessitated reinstating Selective Service, the Faculty voted 105-31 for ROTC. The issue this year was much less debated than in 1949, though many student leaders felt that the final vote on ROTC was taken before students had a fair chance to express themselves on the subject. The whole matter pointed up one very important question, which was merely highlighted by this controversy; just how much voice should students have in establishing the policies of the College? Once again the lament arose that students were being treated as just so much raw material to be processed, rather than as an integral part of the college.

College Has "Place In The Sun For Everyone"—Even Wizards

By Mary Sandvold

I find Oberlin a world where the ordinary social distinctions of wealth, class, race, and religion are blurred; a hotbed of Social Consciousness and Righteous Indignation; and of endless talk, talk, talk—late at night in the dorm, not so late in the Snack Bar and the Pool Hall. Best of all, it is a place where something approximating individuality is possible. At least to me it seems that both Rah-rah-er and Avant Garder can live in uneasy harmony, and follow their own peculiar stars. No one, at any rate, is forced into the pattern of good old Phi Kappa Nu, nor necessarily into the mores of a little Group of Serious Thinkers. I don't doubt that a three-eyed Albanian wizard could find his place in the sun.

Well, if you consider Tappan Square mentioned, a snide remark made about the Arb, and solitary confinement in the stacks properly deplored—this, in 150 words, is Oberlin.

Council Passes Caves for '51 Review Head

Dick Caves was unanimously accepted as editor of the Review by the Student Council last Tuesday. Vote on Bill Thurber's nomination for Director of KOCN submitted by present Director Bob Chamberlain, will be taken at the next meeting.

World peace, a Thanksgiving vacation, and finances were some of the many subjects that were discussed by Student Council President Roger Brucker, and President Stevenson. The work of the Student Council involves everything from forming policies on matters such as these, to approving appointments such as that of Dick Caves as editor of the Review. Administering all elections, approving changes in the charters of organizations, and appointing the heads of such organizations as the Forum Board, CRD, and the Honor Court, are other routine jobs of the Student Council.

The Student Council reviews the budget of all the organizations on campus and determines how much of the money obtained from the Activity Fee should be allotted to each organization. This year the Student Council loaned KOCN, under a two year agreement, all the money that was necessary to put it on the air. The Mock UN, which was a direct outgrowth of the Council-sponsored Four-College Conference, and the letter sent to Washington asking that all other means possible be investigated before going to war, were other achievements of the Student Council. Securing approval of the Thanksgiving vacation was the outstanding accomplishment of the Council, in the opinion of every book-weary student.

Y Advisers, Leaders Meet

Retreats and conferences compose an important part of Y life each year. Late in the spring the YM and YW held their retreats. The Y faculty advisers and retiring cabinet met with the incoming leaders to evaluate the past year's work and make plans for the coming year. The new leaders were given some insight into the problems they were to face and tips as to how these problems could best be solved. Early in the summer there was the annual Geneva district leadership training conference. Then shortly before Orientation Week the combined cabinets met on campus for three packed days of final planning. Here they smoothed out the plans formulated in the spring.

YM-YW Discussions Stress Religious Side of College

They discussed their Sunday morning radio presentations and "Operation Y," the program of small discussion groups which seek to aid the individual to find a deeper awareness of religious reality and where the discussion topics range from the Bible to current politics.

This year also brought a special conference, the National Assembly, town meeting of the Christian Association Movement. Twenty representatives from the Oberlin Y's provided a ferment for a liberal interpretation of the policies that were to guide the student movement for the next four years . . . the questions of race, the church, politics, war, and requirements for membership. Oberlin was asked to make a large display of posters, pictures and lists portraying the work of the Y on our campus. The conference cycle was completed in May with the annual retreat for Ohio student Y's at Tar Hollow.

But the Y's work doesn't all consist of mass meetings and leadership training retreats. Throughout the year the Y's carry on an extensive program in four different fields with a total of fifty committees. The main emphasis is on the religious side of college life. Jointly sponsored weekly vespers, daily matins, devotional literature (Archways), and the YM pre-theolog club as well as the Religious Conference on "Direction in a World of Conflict" helped enrich religious life at Oberlin. Public affairs concerned the Y Open Forum and Social Action committees, while service to the campus was rendered by the Freshman Club, the Seminar in Higher Education, the Y Poll, the Summer Projects committee, and the group which helped Oberlin's foreign students get adjusted. The routine tasks of publicity, office, and membership committees were also a necessary part of the program.

Jo Peck and Laurie Meltzer lead the weekly Wednesday night vespers, sponsored by the YM and YW, while Joe Elder at the organ completes the inspirational mood.

The Y's work is divided into several areas each represented by a commission. Two of the most active this year were the YM and YW Community Service Commissions. Like all Commissions they were in turn divided into committees.

The committee heads (commission members) first get together to formulate the overall working plan and swap techniques. Then the individual committees set up their programs. The Y group at the May Nursery Home found a program already well established. The preparation for this job consisted merely of getting to know the kids and helping with an occasional dish or with the fall housecleaning. Other committees such as the Hi-Y had to start from scratch with their program.

The May Home committee was one of the most popular, and members worked at the Home every afternoon plus Saturday mornings. Stu Scherr and Dave Elder helped the kids with handicraft and in conjunction with Carolyn Sandstrom's YW committee escorted the youngsters to College Artist recitals, basketball games, track meets, and other special events in town and College. The YW committee took the group into Cleveland for Xmas shopping and a look at Santa Claus. Joe Elder was a second Santa at the Yule-time party at the Home.

In Lorain the Community Service Commission found a completely different story. The Y's were asked to help run a recreation unit set up in an old store by the Puerto Rican steel workers. Here, as at the Elyria Housing Project and first semester at the Elyria Crippled Children's Hospital, the Y group led recreation and clubs, and kept the equipment in repair.

In town a YW committee helped at the Haulk Home and the Welcome Home for elderly people. There they read to the patients, wrote their letters, and ran their errands. Also in town the Commissions worked afternoons at the Prospect and Pleasant Street schools leading outdoor recreation including Intramural football and softball in good weather, indoor crafts in stormy.

The local Hi-Y was completely renovated by the YM committee. The plan of this committee as of all others was to turn over as much of the work as possible to the participants themselves. As the boys took over the responsibility their interest in the club increased and so did the membership. Similar jobs were done by Y'ers in the local Cub and Girl Scout organizations.

SOCIAL

Ginny Long was the chairman of the Social Board, and as usual Miss von Wenck lent valuable aid as faculty adviser.

Herb Rinehart and Jack Scott were responsible for the loud speakers, backdrops, television set, and other equipment belonging to the Social Board.

Dot Ranck discharged the duties of Secretary while George Smith handled the debits and credits.

The All-College dances were supervised by Babe McGuire and Ruth Kruger.

The Social Board's TV competed successfully with books and sack.

Not loafing on the job, but merely getting down to work.

BOARD

Bridge, ping-pong, bowling, and billiards tournaments were directed by Benjie Ruekberg.

The remaining members of the Social Board were the eight class social chairmen.

The Camera, Co-ed Modern Dance, Sailing, and Folk Dance clubs were co-ordinated by Pat Turner.

Publicity for all Social Board functions was under the direction of Bruce Mattoon.

Anton Luger displays his talent in one of the many tournaments.

Chairman Mattoon keeps the Social Board bulletin up to date.

President Marv Seeman projects his finished work before the club.

Sixty cents and a date will admit any Oberlin man to one of these All-College dances, sponsored by the Social Board, and featuring one of the many college dance bands.

Board Plans Dances, 'Opus'

In an effort to carry out its purpose of furthering the social activities of the entire student body, the Social Board introduced a new tradition to Oberlin this year—Obie's Opus. Highlights included a bonfire, a splash party, and co-ed volleyball. Second semester KOCN piped dance music to All-Colleges in Rec, and live bands played only once a month, under a new policy.

Volleyball was one of the most popular events at Obie's Opus. It proved to be a good co-ed game because of the fact that no special physical qualifications or athletic talent were necessary in order to enjoy the game.

Rec Hall is filled every other Friday night with enthusiastic members of the Folk Dance Club. They take turns calling, work out new figures, and rehearse familiar dances under the general supervision of Dan Kinsey.

The libe becomes a second home for those in search of education; the Snack Bar serves the same purpose for those who would pursue food, bridge, and TV. The coming of the Wolf Book increased the bell girl's duties a hundred per cent, as many of the more studious decided that coeducation was a wonderful thing after all and ought to be investigated. Pers were the only barriers . . . (with perhaps a few minor exceptions . . . studying, lights out, and that girl back home). The frosh run around the bonfire and Hell Day with pigtails and gym suits will keep the "1953 salaam" deep in the memory of all humiliated freshmen. That first week was only a taste of the "new life" that was to confront the Class of '54 and establish itself and Oberlin as a definite part of every freshman.

Off the Busses— Into Mill—Frosh Orientation Ordeal

Four days of Orientation are given to the freshman entering Oberlin College. The initial architectural shock is minor compared with the first look at the "roommate." From now on the words "mixer," "Finney," "rec," "zo," "JC," "Orientation," and "Snack Bar" are standbys in the frosh vocabulary. Tours and tests come and go, and gradually the blank stares at the dinner table are replaced by grins and winks as faces become more familiar. Meetings with the campus wheels acquaint the frosh with the extracurricular workings of Oberlin. Schedule corrections pull girls out of the men's Phys Ed classes, and counselors help untangle Freshman Week romances and problems.

Ralph Bibler entertains Howard Furcron, Lee Striker, and Bill Cupery at the Orientation Week reception of faculty advisees.

Joe Frosh (Joe Elder) was introduced to Oberlin's many extracurricular activities by supersalesmen and politician Leigh Gunn.

The psychologists say that there is nothing to this OSU general aptitude test, if you know how and when to use a stylus.

Forum Board Discussions Aimed At Peace, Politics

George and Society; Eva and Society; Fritz and Society; Bart and Society. Thus ran this year's Forum Board, with Chairman Rawick, secretaries Stanton and Harshbarger, and treasurer Harrison; and thus ran the publicity for the opening forum on the function of Art in society. This forum featured Benno Frank, director of the Karamu playhouse in Cleveland; Owen Downs, music critic for the New York Times; Irving Howe, authority on literature; and Paul Travis, on sculpture and plastic arts. At the second forum Owen Lattimore, of McCarthy fame, gave a packed church the benefit of his first-hand knowledge of the Far Eastern situation in two talks entitled "Explosion in Asia." The struggle to defend civil liberties in postwar Germany and Japan was presented by Roger Baldwin, former head of the American Civil Liberties Union, in a February Forum. Other second-semester forums selected by the Board included discussion of current European problems, South Eastern Asia (India, Pakistan, and Burma), and the McCarren Bill, as well as a formal student gripe-session on current campus problems.

Following the Art and Society forum, President Stevenson and the members of the Board entertained the speakers and their wives at a special dinner.

It was through Benno Frank, speaker on drama at the first forum, that G. G. Cascio got his job as Koko in the Karamu playhouse production of the Mikado.

A highly controversial figure speaking on an even more controversial subject, Owen Lattimore discusses the timely topic "Explosion in Asia."

George Rawick and Roxane Offner perform one of the most important functions of the Forum Board, contacting potential speakers throughout the country.

Blizzard, British Liven Forensic Union Schedule

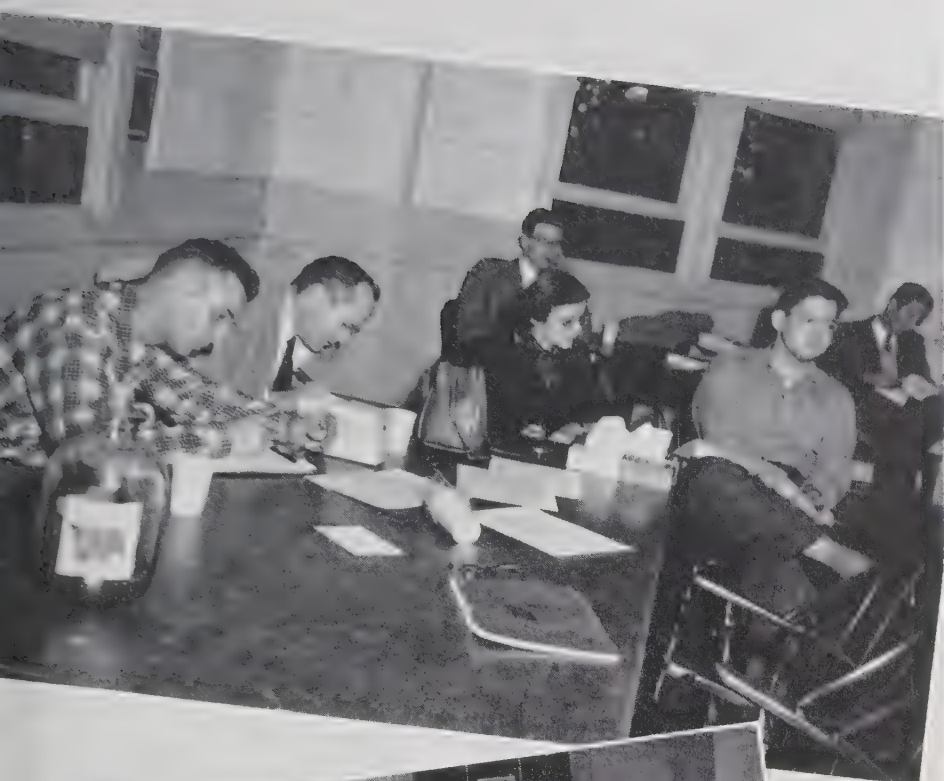

"Is your health worth a movie a week?" "Are we solving America's race problem?" "Is the U.N. out of date?" "Will we get back in time for the dance tonight?" These were the vital questions that concerned the Forensic Union this year in their debates and discussions throughout Ohio. Led by Jack Brinley, Rudy Arn, and Mary Sandvold, the group of forty-two took part in six intercollegiate debate tournaments including the Women's State, Men's State, Annual Conference on Public Affairs, and the Delta Sigma Rho conference at the Congress Hotel in Chicago. Tail-Twister's antics weren't so startling as they have been some years, but the "Blizzard of '50" did add excitement to the year and cancel a few of the many annual trips to Women's Leagues, P.T.A.'s, Rotary's, and Lions clubs. The British Lion was also entertained at the annual Anglo-Oberlin debate here on campus, and the same Lion was carefully examined in the popular panel "What's Happening in Europe Today" featuring talks by Oberlin's students from England, Austria, Germany, and Czechoslovakia. New members of this year's squad were assimilated into the senior squad after initial instruction and practice with the club's three advisers, Mr. Auer, Mr. Boase, and Mr. Gunderson.

Mr. Gunderson, four veterans of last year's squad, and one jug of sweet cider selected the new members of Forensic Union.

Formal attire, parliamentary debate, British accents, and Anglo-American humor were featured at the opening debate this fall.

Advisor Auer gives president Brinley a personal demonstration of the effectiveness of humor in a discussion or debate.

Mummers Workshop Offers Opportunity for Writing, Directing, Acting Practice

Dick Lillich's dramatic aptitude is carefully appraised by the other members of the Workshop. Their comments and criticisms will form an important part of his training.

Ever direct your own show? Like to see your own work in actual performance, or hear your original compositions sung in a musical? Ever crave a chance to act the lead in a student production? It was for just such people that Nick Psacharopoulos's Mummers held their Workshop every second Sunday throughout the year. Thirty-five to forty people took advantage of this student-initiated program. Special sessions were provided to instruct students in the art of writing or directing their own shows, and the Sunday performances provided opportunity for actual production before a group of students eager to offer constructive criticism.

Drama In 12 Lessons: Audience Sees Only

Finding a suitable studio in which to work is the first job in any organization. While Mummeters seemed content with its present location, ODA expanded, and G&S considered four buildings for headquarters.

Mummers tryouts under Nick Psacharopoulos follow selection of original scripts. While G&S is not bothered by student scripts, it has a more limited area than ODA from which to select its production.

Problems such as inflections of the voice, typical behavior, and proper interpretations of the author, are all part of director McLaughlin's job of helping the players "become" the character they are portraying.

Scraping together appropriate attire, and altering rented and borrowed costumes is the thankless job of the costume committee. Bonnie Ingham measures Marlene Herold for a Mummers production.

With a combination of rouge, eye shadow, powder, and grease paint, applied under the supervision of a make-up crew, students are transformed into such characters as Koko, Mrs. Antrobus, and Brack Weaver.

The picture on the wall, ash tray, and desk lamp are typical items which are the responsibility of the property committee. Stu Carlton and Jeannette Eiseman change the props during "Skin Of Our Teeth."

Final Step In Complex Show Production

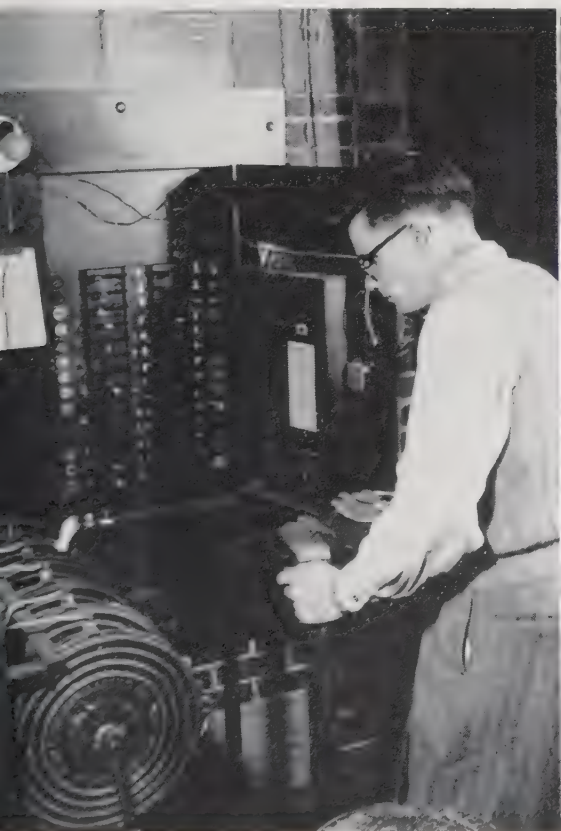

The men's chorus of the Mikado learn from director Boyers to coordinate Japanese mannerisms with their singing. When a production involves a large chorus, much rehearsal time is spent in polishing up the routine.

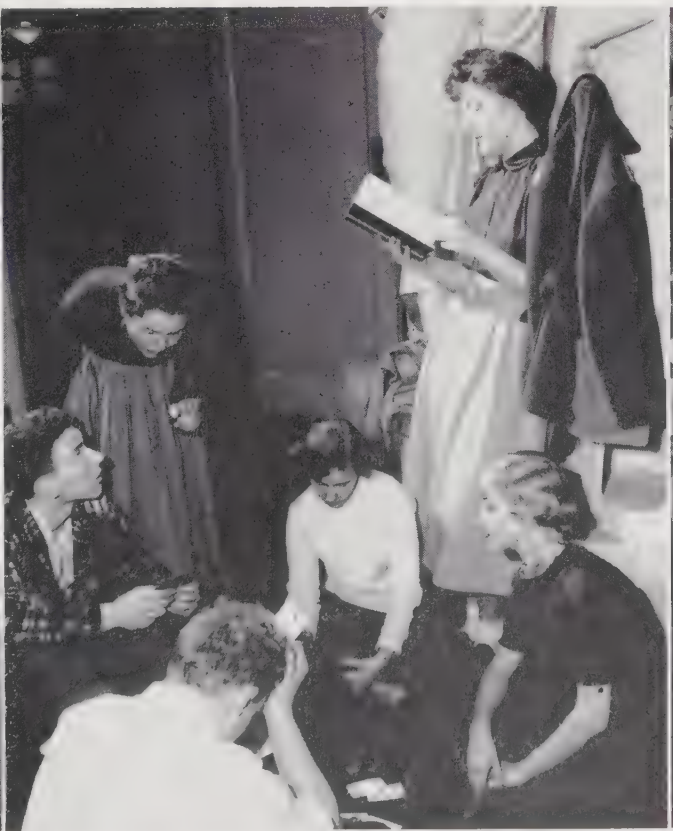

Learning a singing lead in G&S or Mummers requires supplementing the regular rehearsals with special practices. In the case of ODA, these private rehearsals usually consist of reciting to a protesting roommate.

The stage crew is confronted by such problems as realistic representations, and that quick change of scenery between acts. For the Mikado, the main concern was how to make the sets stable, yet portable for the tours.

Electrician Dan Reisig surveys the switchboards in Allen Auditorium. These wires, fuses, switches, and rheostats are the keys to effective lighting of the finished production, as ODA's "Madwoman of Chaillot."

During long acts and between cues, bridge, gab sessions, and last minute homework relieve the tension for tired Mummers stagehands and actors who assemble in the back corridors of the Art Building.

On opening night the audience applauds the combined efforts of everyone connected with the Mummers production. Shows were staged at the Art Building, the High School, the Apollo, and even in other cities.

The actual Assembly was the summation of the work of many, especially Secretary-General Dave Jacobs and his staff of coordinators. A Polish rally and hours of research by all delegations also preceded the Assembly.

Oberlin, Denison, Wesleyan, Wooster Cooperate

A UN police force? Disarmament? Economic aid? Seating of Nationalist China? These were the questions that faced the Four-College Mock UN Convention. Benjamin H. Brown, Deputy Secretary-General of the US Mission to the UN, gave the keynote address which stressed the recent accomplishments of the UN. The Convention reassembled in the afternoon for the first legislative session. There was a mad scramble by each bloc to get its pet resolution on the floor. The small nations, headed by Pakistan, presented a proposal for the establishment of a Collective Action Council which was to administer the permanent UN police force and armament inspection staff. Though this proposal was at first rejected by the Assembly, it was reintroduced with revisions in the evening session. Bolivia, the US, and the USSR had proposals which they eagerly, but unsuccessfully, presented. When China arose to present their Bancroft Plan, the Soviet bloc declared a recess and marched from the Assembly to the cheers of the unofficial Red Chinese delegation which sat in the back of the Assembly. As the evening wore on, it became apparent that questions of personal privilege, points of order, and minor amendments were consuming the Convention time, so attempts were made to move on to more important and constructive action. In the closing minutes the revised small-nations' proposal was re-introduced and an attempt was made to bring it to a vote with the minimum of parliamentary debate. However, time ran out before the final vote could be counted.

In UN Convention, Four-College Conference

The initial foundation for the Four-College Conference was laid on February 11, 1950, when deans and student representatives from Wooster, Ohio Wesleyan, Denison, and Oberlin met to discuss a proposal for cooperation in various non-athletic areas. It was decided that a coordinating committee should be organized in each college, which would serve as a clearing house for all future inter-collegiate activities. The actual plans for the Four College Conference, as well as those for the Mock UN Convention, were formulated at an April meeting in Wooster.

The Conference became an actuality on December 2. After an opening assembly, the delegates, representing most of the organizations of the four colleges, were divided into such interest groups as dramatics, student government, and political organizations. The general opinion of the forty-one Oberlin representatives seemed to be that the Conference was worthwhile, but that there were areas of cooperation which were yet to be explored.

Suggestions for radio programs and engineering problems were worked over by KOCN'ers Bob Chamberlain and Bill Thurber at the panel on radio.

Regulations, disciplinary problems, and the power held by the different women's boards were the main topics debated in the session on women's government.

Experts Advise Women On Careers

Keynoting the biennial Women's Career Conference, Dr. Margaret Mead discussed careers and marriage. The purpose of the Conference was to acquaint Oberlin women with the different job opportunities that were available and to give them a chance to arrange interviews with the speakers. Others profited from the Conference in deciding upon or confirming their major.

The speakers were selected in accordance with results obtained from a preliminary poll which determined the specific interests of every woman on campus. Careers in fields such as child welfare, retailing, advertising, and labor, were grouped under the Social Sciences and Business-Government. Speakers who were authorities in these areas were featured on February 26 and 27. Nursing, religious education, private school work, and other careers in the Music-Humanities and Education-Sciences fields were presented on March 8 and 9.

A special panel, "Homes of Tomorrow," discussing everything from childbirth to interior decorating, was held on the evening of March 9, concluding the Career Conference for 1951 and the work of Trudy Hess, its chairman.

Coordinating committee: Chairman Trudy Hess, Marlowe Anderson, Nancy Kennedy, Pat Loring, Dotty Ranck, Ginny Wagner, Nancy Lau, Jane Kaufmann. These women worked hard to make the Conference successful.

Artist Series Features Foreign, Native Musicians In Six-Month Season

Continuing the tradition begun in 1878, the Conservatory again presented an Artist Recital series featuring outstanding musicians from many nations. Rudolf Firkusny, well-known Czechoslovakian pianist, opened this year's series with an excellent concert on October 17. Early in November during their first tour of the U.S., the Hungarian Quartet presented a program ranging from Beethoven to Bartok. The Metropolitan's only coloratura mezzo-soprano, Jennie Tourel, who has won acclaim in Europe, South America, and Canada, sang numbers by Schubert, Rossini, Debussy, and Liszt.

In his renditions of violin music by Brahms, Bach, Prokofieff, and Paganini-Kreisler, Ruggiero Ricci displayed that excellence of technical skill, interpretation, and artistic discretion for which he is so famous. On February 8 Bohemian-born Rudolf Serkin, pianist, thrilled the audience with the grandeur and majesty, liveliness and buoyancy, and intellectual perception of his playing. The series was concluded in March by a concert by the famous cellist and teacher, Pierre Fournier, and the final of four concerts by the Cleveland Orchestra under George Szell.

The annual performances of the Cleveland Orchestra highlight the concert season.

An inspiring day for the members of the Symphony Band was when Percy Grainger, noted English composer, played the piano for the afternoon rehearsal, as well as the concert in the evening.

Oberlin Music Stars Ukes, Quartets, Bands

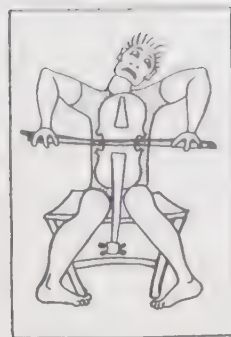

From the first days of Freshman disorganization to the long-labored end of Senior year, songfests of all sorts are part of the Oberlin social schedule. Dining hall singing usually dies out after freshman year, but Christmas brings at least one chorus of "Hark the Herald Angels Shout" from even the most dormant dorm. Also at that season, carollers cover the community with good cheer and Yuletide spirits. After-dinner gatherings around the piano often feature the uke and banjo fans and even inspire the bathtub baritones to do a little warbling outside the shower. Folk songs, pep marches, and jazz also invade these parlor musicales. The traveling quartets who punctuate the dinner hour with singing commercials can, on occasion, be found singing for an All-College affair or as after-dinner entertainment.

Women in every dorm were flattered to be serenaded by quartet Al Chamberlin, Joe Elder, Mickey Joseph, and Jim Proud.

These same quartets may add or lose numbers as they congregate around the women's dorms on warm evenings and sing romantic ballads to the campus coeds who wait, pajama-clad, for the familiar strains of "Goodby, My Coney Island Baby." One of the most informal songsters is the gay individual who amuses himself going along the street by humming the latest hit or a snatch from Beethoven's Fifth . . . if he happens to be taking Mus. Ap. Reports from the men's dorms show a general increase in the uke trend, and there is a good bit of speculation going around that strumming may even rival bridge as the campus study habit. It seems that the boys are getting in shape for spring picnics in the arb or at the quarry where the casual stroller may often hear the college songs curling up with the smoke of the campfire. The women turn musical around Y-P season, when the song contest offers lasting fame to the writer of a melody which will capture the hearts of the judges. The marching band goes through its paces during football season, then moves indoors to watch the basketball games and blow off steam during the time outs. Individual artists gather on Saturday evenings to furnish tunes both sweet and hot for All-College dances. And so, as someone somewhere once said, "If Music be the language of coeducation, play on, Students of Oberlin, play on."

CRD Campaign

The annual CRD formal was held at Hales to the music of Hugh Thompson's sixteen piece orchestra and Dutch Wolff's combo. Intermission entertainment was provided by maestro Thompson at the piano.

Advertising that cure-all Hadacol, Hoffmann's Hillbillies presented at the Pholies a Southern mountain radio program which included revival hymns, letters and "local" announcements.

This year's CRD odds (10,000 to 11) weren't quite as good as last year's, but the odds are never as high the second year when a group has just proved itself by paying $9,700 to the ten organizations to which it pledged. And the money brought results. Several students now on campus are here under the auspices of the National Scholarship and Service Fund for Negro Students; two D.P. students are currently being supported by CRD funds ; and in Naples, Italy, Bel Paulson, chairman of last year's drive, is working with the Italian Service Mission, another recipient of the 10,000 to 10.

The eleven projects for this year were selected early in the fall by the CRD executive committee headed by Jo Thompson and advised by Mrs. Frances Seaman. Need, personal contact with the work of the group, and the probable effectiveness of the contributions were all taken into consideration in making the final selection.

Amid the booths and stalls of the Carnival was found the most lucrative concession of all, the "Burton Burlesque," complete with its chorus line, off-color jokes, and a masculine stripper.

Money didn't always flow as freely as it does here at the CRD reps' banquet at Goodrich.

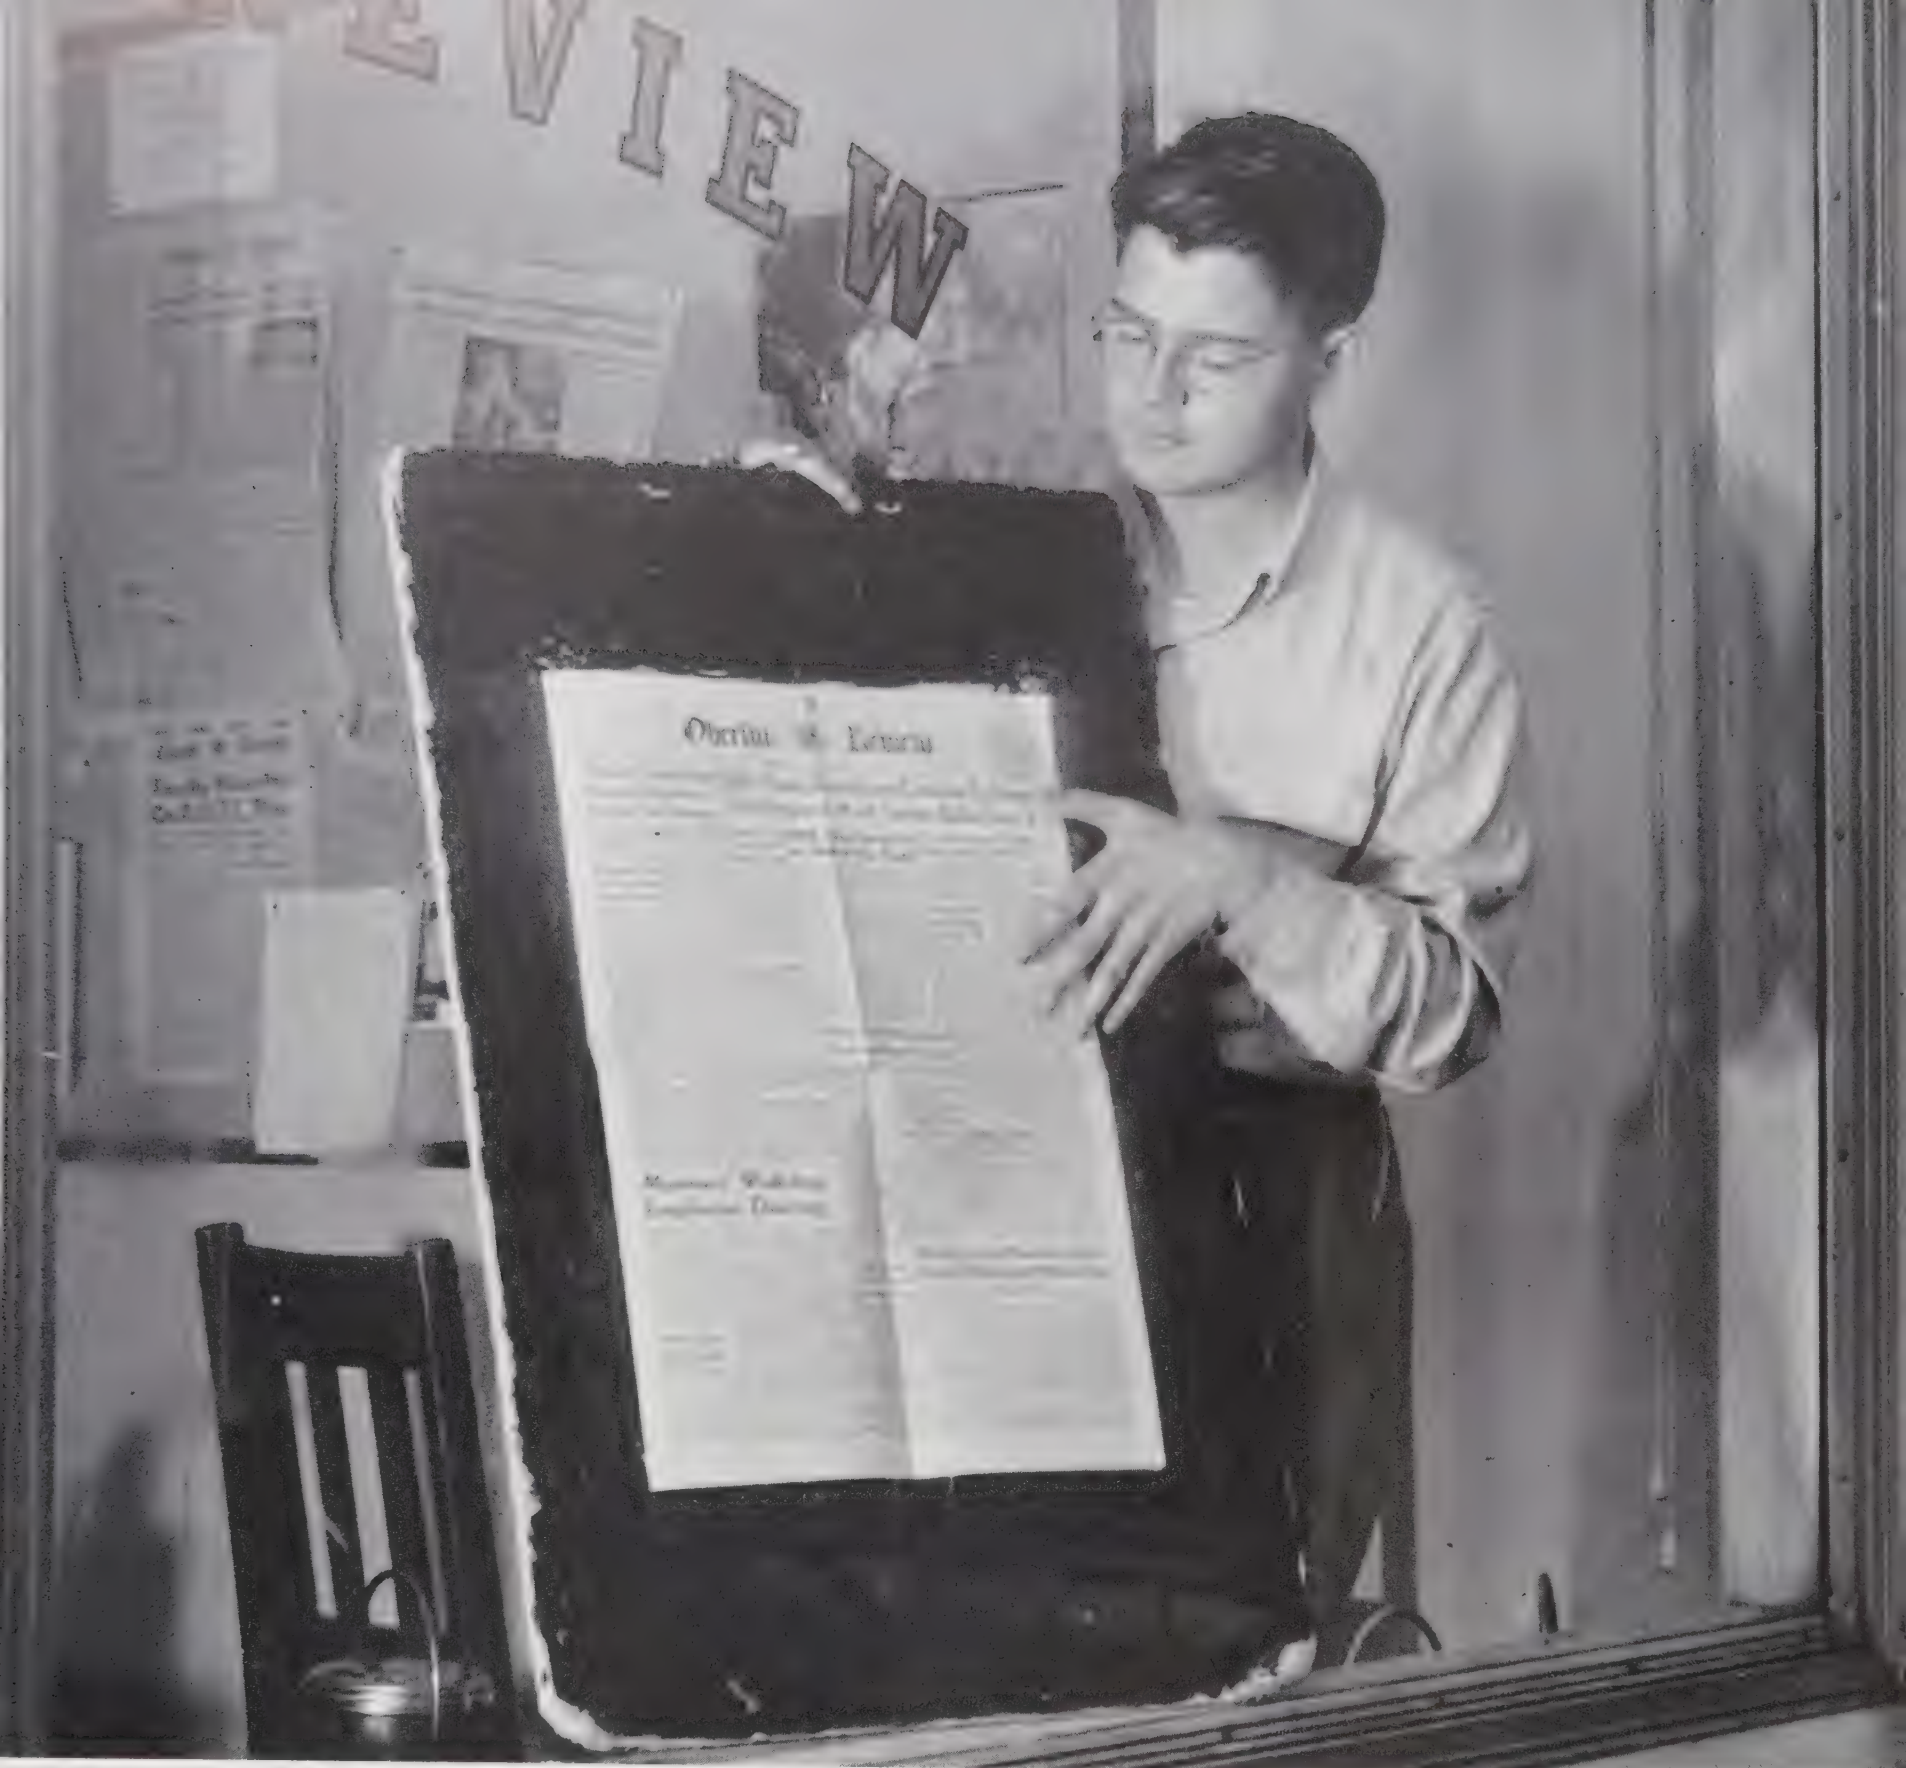

Aims At High Goal

Then came the drive: in the fall the knock-on-your-door and no-sleep-until-you-pledge campaign began under the direction of Al Jeandheur and Brad Foulds; in November was the Variety Show with Greek Chorus and numerous acts, under Sue Carroll; in December couples were "Spellbound" by Al Hornaday's abstract theme; in January the zither pluckers from Austria strutted their native stuff; in February it was the annual "Stageroo" with ice cream and doughnut vendors, coed basketball, and other entertainment planned by Sally Scott and Don Schalch; and in April was the Carnival with its many gyp-joints planned by the dorms and co-ordinated by Sam Langstaff and Shirley MacMillan.

Along with the coed basketball game and the class skits, the Stageroo offered a faculty skit, "Mid-Century Night's Dream." This review brought back General Shurtleff, the famous Oberlin x's, Charleston flappers from the '30's, and forecasted the day when Oberlin profs would dress alike so they could think differently.

Editor Ken Clark posts a finished Review in the window of the Publications Building, signifying the completion of another semi-weekly issue.

Review News, Editorials Keep Campus Awake

"Great Issues" is the name of a course offered to students at Dartmouth College. Oberlin's nearest correlative lies in the Review, the semi-weekly student newspaper. Throughout its 76th year, the Review continued to act as Oberlin's most authoritative news source and as the campus sounding board for "great issues" involving the WSGL, educational policy, ROTC, and student government.

Review Material Undergoes Complex Processing Before Paper "Hits The Streets"

Student reporters soon find that working for the Review . . . or any newspaper . . . is as much work as it is glamour. Each Tuesday and Friday the Review Reporter checks the assignment board posted in the Review window for the particular story he is to cover. After gathering the facts and figures for his story, holding a short conference with the City Editor, and mulling over the details in his mind, the reporter is set to write up the story in accepted journalese style. While all this goes on, the guiding lights of the editorial board are discussing possible editorial treatment of current campus topics, ranging from the morality of the Korean war to gently chiding the Buildings and Grounds Department for not clearing the ice from sidewalks soon enough.

Once out of the reporter's hands, a Review story undergoes a constant metamorphosis. After passing under the unstinting blue pencil of a City Editor and the critical gaze of the Managing Editor, the story is sent, along with reams of other copy, to the composing shop of the Oberlin Times, printers of the Review. Now temporarily preserved in lead, the story is placed in the press forms and printed as one part of a Review issue. Only distributing the copies of the paper to the various dorms remains to complete the publishing of one edition of the Oberlin Review.

Yearbook Group Survives Staff Dinner

Even before the 1950 Hi-O-Hi had returned from the bindery, the newly appointed editor, Tony Armer, was at work rounding up an associate editor and staff. As soon as the campus had a good look at the 1950 version, the staff reported all criticisms and objections they had heard, and tried to determine exactly what the student body wanted in a yearbook. After sufficient airing of opinions, the editors buckled down to create a concept of the 1951 Hi-O-Hi. Emerging ideas stressed the value of picture stories over a list of activities, an informal layout, and a keying of copy to fit the pictures, emphasizing the story in each photograph.

Early summer found the editor and engraver designing the basic layouts for the book. By Orientation Week Armer had worked out many of the finer details in an all-inclusive dummy. But still work could not begin in full swing; there was a Wolf Book to put out. The frosh were photographed and identified, and the book illustrated and sent to the printer's, from whence it returned to the outstretched hands of the Sophomore men, one week early.

Many are the steps to the printed picture: Rechsteiner takes a shot; next Harding and Monroe develop the film, and the best shot is selected by the section editor for enlarging.

The enlarged print is then mounted by the layout staff and sent to the engraver who makes a copper plate; finally Skow pastes engraving proof in the dummy to facilitate caption writing.

Art editor Bruce Mattoon inspects a division page decorated with his Yeoman. The red-colored area was drawn on a separate sheet which fitted over the black outline.

Char Phillips and Teddy Arakawa proofread copy while managing editor Molly Keller checks the number of letters per line and length of article with specifications in the dummy.

Deadline Rushes; Produces Book On Time

Then the routine began. The art staff transferred ideas into illustrations, from which the incidental drawings and "Yeoman" division pages were selected. The photography staff was briefed on the proper use of Speed Graphics and on darkroom procedure. The section editors and staffs started grinding out copy and captions to be edited, typed, and proofread. Meanwhile, the layout staff tangled with rubber cement and razor blades, mounting 1142 photographs.

But there was a lighter side to the year's work. While Mr. Stofan and the photography staff were in the middle of snapping faculty and students, the Hi-O-Hi threw a dinner for the one hundred staff members. Later it sponsored a Hi-O-Hi All-College dance. And in the late winter, frantic all-night deadline stands were broken by strains from the KOCN studios or trips across the street for Cokes and hamburgs. There was the thrill of an advance look at pictures, the excitement which accompanied the opening of every bundle from printer or engraver. But the greatest satisfaction came when the job was done and the finished book examined.

Tony Armer presents Alice Babcock and Steve Ware with a genuine door-prize at the Hi-O-Hi dance, where past yearbooks and the steps in Hi-O-Hi production were displayed.

After the poetry and two prose committees have passed about half of the contributions that are submitted, the editorial board makes the final selections. Dean Pruitt, Marty Craig, Editor Bob Baxter, Susan Schatzki, and Don Ludgin are discussing a story at an Editorial Board meeting.

Yeoman Prints Student Art, Prose, Poetry

The aim of the 1951 Yeoman was to publish many different styles of writing. This policy was carried out in all three of its issues, with prose ranging from a story about adolescence by Helen Sweet to a grim war tale by Jack Cook. Emphasis on variety was also extended into the art field, with everything from photographs to abstractions. Another innovation was a political essay on Far Eastern Policy. "Chicago is Very Hot in Summer" by Warren Prince, "Friends Who Are Strangers" by Phil McFarland, and "The Gesture" by Jack Skow, were some of the outstanding prose works. Roger Brucker will be remembered for his story, "Smooth Talker," which he illustrated himself, and his oil painting. The poetry of Don Ludgin and John Cawelti, and the covers by Al Shelmardine and Joanne Redlin, will also be connected with the 1951 Yeoman and editor Bob Baxter.

Every Yeoman cover goes through two stages before it becomes the finished cover on the right. After the original sketch, the one on the top, is selected and returned from the engraver, final decision must be made concerning the layout of the cover.

Ed Stark, Bob Chamberlain, and Bill Thurber used the truck and advice of Joe Bianco of the town power company to finish stringing station wires to the dorms.

KOCN

At 3:00 PM, November 5th, KOCN finally went on the air bringing up-to-the minute coverage of the Congressional election. Starting with a temporary outfit set up last spring to broadcast over police wires which covered only a handful of dorms, station manager Bob Chamberlain and his staff had now prepared the station to provide continuous service on a permanent basis. Many problems which confronted them had finally been resolved. The new station lines had been strung; public liability insurance covered the lines; one studio with its soundproofing had been completed; the minimum technical equipment necessary to provide service had been constructed; the dream of last year was now a reality.

KOCN Solves Initial Problems

Don Walker and Dave Clark paint the studio which the staff had previously soundproofed with rock wool. Later rugs were laid and the piano and chairs purchased.

Don Walker also doubled as electrician to help construct station equipment. The KOCN transmitter was designed by Rog Millikan, while Ed Stark designed the console.

Newstaff chief Scottie Bryce headed a crew of eager newscasters who daily prepared and presented news ranging from the Korean War to Student Council election returns.

Bob Hanson, Ralph Winkler, and Rog Brucker, the Banana Bunch, "patter with appeal," ran a program consisting of comedy, skits, and cinema satire.

Radio Station Begins Full-Scale Operations

Besides station manager Thurber, faculty advisor J. J. Auer, and non-voting secretary Peg Henderson, the board of directors for 1951 included the department heads: Bob Hanson, a temporary program director; Ed Stark, chief engineer; and Connie Ford, business manager. All policies of the station were controlled by this board, which replaced Bob Chamberlain's pioneer staff in February.

By second semester KOCN was broadcasting fifty hours a week. Over one hundred staff members were at work to transmit the daily broadcasts which included music, both classical ("Master Works," "Silver Strings") and popular ("Here Comes Rhythm," "Music 'Til Midnight"), news, and sports roundups. Special broadcasts included complete election coverage, home sports events, and even an occasional out-of-town event such as the Western Reserve basketball game and the Ohio Conference swimming championship.

Mock Senatorial Election, Debates on Arms, Korea Head Political Activities

A mock Ohio senatorial election started things moving this year for the two existing political organizations. Student debates, a YR torch-light rally at the Arch, and speeches by Republican Otto Lyman and Democrat Henry Busch comprised some of the efforts of these rival groups. Taft beat Ferguson by a sweeping plurality of 317 votes, while write-in candidate Gladys Swigart took a poor third.

Other events of the year included the YR Lincoln Day dinner with Mayor Tom Wright of Mansfield, and the SDA-sponsored forums. These educational forums included talks by Oberlin professors on "Should We Use the Atom Bomb?" "Should We Rearm Germany?" "The 38th Parallel, What Then?" and "Taft's Record." Outside speakers were called on to present "The Task Ahead for Liberals" and an analysis of the Congressional elections. SDA also sponsored dorm discussions on current topics, and were largely responsible for the instigation of the proposed revisions of the Men's Board, Women's Board, Women's Senate, Dorm Council, and Honor Court.

At the Taft-Hartley debates, YR's Leigh Gunn and Preston Plews answered the SDA'ers Peter Chaitin and Jim Beck.

Voting for the jointly-sponsored mock senatorial election was held in Peters Court where the two rival parties had previously displayed their propaganda.

The crowd stands enthralled at the Young Republican torch-light rally at Arch 7. These informal gatherings often form a center of political expression on campus.

Church Groups Study Current Social, Religious Issues, Church History

Topics from "Academic Freedom and Loyalty Oaths" to "A Buddhist View of Christianity" occupied the First Church group. Drawing on faculty and students, they presented series of discussions on ethical, religious, and social concepts. The group was host to the Ohio United Student Fellowship. "Learning by Osmosis" described the informal discussions of the Episcopal student group. After weekly worship services, Reverend McCracken led discussions on the Old Testament prophets and outstanding modern figures in social fields. Communion breakfasts once a month and a day of Recollection with Monsignor Newton were held by the Newman Club of the Sacred Heart Church. The twenty met for weekly lectures on Church history by Father Robert Blair. A Christmas party, a freshman tea, and a banquet supplemented weekly meetings of the Methodist students. Three general themes were followed in their first semester discussions: "The Oberlin Dilemma;" "Tension Areas, and How These Can Be Released;" "The Christian Home."

Father Blair addresses the Newman Club in one of his series of lectures on the history of Church Councils.

The Episcopal student group holds discussion in the beautifully decorated modern home of Reverend McCracken.

Recreational activities for the Methodist group included everything from ping-pong to an ice cream social.

People Sulk, Orate, Meet In Campus Odd-Spots

Between classes, before and after meals, in odd moments Oberlinites congregated in traditional meeting places. There was almost always a crowd in the lobby or in front of the libe, a discussion group under the 'Chapel Today' sign in Peter's Court, a bridge seminar in the Snack Bar, a debate in the listening room of the con, or a dissertation on the end of the world in a corner booth at the Pool Hall. Other unworldly problems were hashed out by the pin ball machines; stronger arguments were taken up at Presti's. Dorm parlors and lounges, the quarries in the spring, and coffee spots are congregating places known to all. Tappan Square was the scene of hasty exchanges every hour on the hour as the flux of students from Westervelt met that from Peters, the Libe, or the Art Building. And rendezvous for two under the arch, in the arb, and in other such inconspicuous places were always popular with many.

Win Seven Out of Eight

With a large group of sophomores joining a solid nucleus of 14 lettermen, Oberlin's 1950 football squad had the best season of any Yeoman civilian grid team since 1926, winning 7 out of 8 games.

The 1950 team was built around a fast and powerful backfield and a very heavy defensive line, averaging 215 pounds, which compiled the best defensive record in many years.

The team rolled through Wittenberg, Allegheny, Hamilton, and DePauw without a lot of trouble, but Ohio Wesleyan proved too much. Combining the breaks and the sensational running of Bob Gardner, the Bishops defeated the Yeomen in a game that was in doubt until midway in the last quarter. Bob Burnham got the Yeomen back in the win column the next week by running for two scores in the mud to whip his father's Rochester squad. An aroused Yeoman team came on the field for the second half at Denison to come from behind and defeat the Big Red. The Yeomen, out to complete the year in style, swamped Oberlin's traditional rival Wooster to round out the 1950 season.

As Pete Loveland and Ed Tobias run interference, senior halfback Chet McPhee picks up another 15 yards against Wittenberg.

Ward Shawver, DePauw's leading ground gainer, cracks Oberlin's line for five yards before being brought down by Lynn Partridge.

End Bart Harrison and Wittenberg's Don Hertler go up after one of Kev O'Connor's passes. Harrison, who played offensive and defensive end, received honorable mention on the AP All-American team for 1950.

Toby Allen and John Atwater rush the Western Reserve goalie.

Soccer Team Loses One; Ends Win Streak at 12

Going into the 1950 season with a string of ten straight games without defeat, Coach Ben Collins's soccer men found no trouble keeping their record clean through the first two matches as Western Reserve and Allegheny fell almost without a battle. At Slippery Rock, however, the Yeomen were faced with a strong team and a field of mud. The mud hampered both teams, and, in spite of an over-time period, the game ended in a scoreless tie. After Carnegie Tech had fallen to the Yeomen, the booters traveled to Wheaton to meet the Crusaders. It was Wheaton that had broken an eleven game winning streak in 1948, 3-2, and it was Wheaton that had marred the 1949 season with a 2-2 tie. The jinx held as Wheaton snapped the Yeoman unbeaten string at 14 with a 2-1 win. Wheaton scored once early in the first period and repeated in the second. Toby Allen averted a shut-out by heading in a goal for the Yeomen in the second half. Two wins over Big Ten opponents followed. Prince Browne scored twice to lead the Yeomen against Purdue and Captain Dick Dudley's two goals sparked Oberlin to a 5-1 win over Ohio State's Buckeyes. Kent State fell victim to an avalanche of Yeomen goals as Pete Bellows, Glenn Carter, John Atwater, Browne, and Dudley scored for Oberlin. In the final game Kenyon succeeded in stopping the Yeomen only one short of a season record as the Lords bowed, 2-0.

Harriers Have 5-3 Season; Win Championship

FIRST ROW: J. Tanner, D. Staley, J. Frost, J. Brough, R. Harrison, A. Meardon. SECOND ROW: Coach Kinsey, J. Brooks, D. Hatch, R. Whitney, D. Emory, D. Gibbons, P. Mattson.

Captain Justin Frost and Junior Dave Staley led the 1950 Yeoman cross-country team to another winning season, compiling a record of five wins and three losses. Coach Kinsey began the season with six lettermen, Joe Brough, John Tanner, Dave Emory, Arnie Meardon, Frost, and Staley. These six, together with Dave Gibbons and Bob Whitney, formed a balanced team. Although Frost and Staley were consistently in the first three, the greater team strength of Bowling Green, Case Tech, and Wheaton brought defeat. Wheaton's Crusaders were coached by Gil Dodds, nationally known distance runner.

The victory over Baldwin-Wallace marked the 100th win by Coach Kinsey's harriers since he came to Oberlin in 1928. In the Conference Meet held at Wooster, Frost and Staley took second and third places respectively with the rest of the team among the first twelve, to give Oberlin its third straight conference Crown and the 15th for Coach Kinsey.

Team Breaks Scoring Records

With Co-captains Robie Shults and Rich Kuusela setting a record-breaking pace, the 1950 Yeoman cage team furnished Field House fans with another spectacular season in winning 12 of 18 games. Sophomore Bob Horst joining Kuusela at guard and Bob Bent, Doc Erlenbach, and Fritz Harshbarger alternating at the two pivot positions, Oberlin boasted a team that was fast, tall, and accurate, backed up by reserves that were deep at all positions.

Robie Shults capped his sports career at Oberlin by writing his name on all the basketball scoring records in the book. His 335 points scored in the 1950-1951 season tops his own record set the year before. Totaling 756 points for his three-year career, Shults added that record to his list. With only one record left, that for a single game, Shults went after that in his final game, netting 31 points against Heidelberg for a new college and Field House record.

Four victories before Christmas vacation got the 1950 Yeomen off to a flying start. Hiram, Fenn, and Buffalo State fell without too much struggle, but Peru State furnished Oberlin fans with some real thrills. With the visitors leading by two points and the clock showing a second left, Kuusela let go with a one-hander from almost the middle of the floor. As the buzzer sounded, the ball swished through the basket, sending the game into overtime. In the extra period, Oberlin's reserves outplayed Peru to clinch the win. The first few weeks after vacation saw the Yeomen riding up one week and down the next, losing and then winning. The brightest spot was the Rochester game. With 86 points, the Yeomen set a new Field House scoring record and Co-captain Kuusela's 29 points marked a new individual high for Oberlin's floor, a record that lasted only one month. The rest of the season continued the up and down cycle with the Yeomen oftener up than down. The Heidelberg win and Shults's record-breaking performance ended the 1950 season.

Co-captain Robie Shults adds another two points against Buffalo State as two of the visitors look on in awe.

Fritz Harshbarger puts the Yeomen out in front of Mount Union on a fast break. His eleven points sparked Oberlin's winning rally.

Tom Palmer, a star performer in his first year on the team, does a jack-knife dive against Slippery Rock.

SWIMMING

With Ralph Bibler in his first year of coaching the varsity team, Oberlin's 1950-51 swimming team added new laurels to its past brilliant record. In addition to running the three-year undefeated string to thirty-one, the team captured the Conference Crown for the third successive year. The perfect season was marred only by a loss to a powerful Rochester team in the last meet of the year. Although there were individual stars in each event and the ability to take a large number of first places was unchallenged, the team was hampered by the lack of depth necessary to capture enough seconds and thirds to insure victory against a team as strong as Rochester. In this meet the Yeomen got off to a good start with Co-captain Glenn Carter, Harry Hunsicker, and Marsh Nottingham combining their efforts to win the Medley Relay. Co-captain Dick Ohmann added two firsts and Carter another along with Hunsicker and Dave Staley to give Oberlin six out of eight firsts. But with Rochester taking seconds and thirds in most events, the score stood Oberlin 35, Rochester 33, before the final relay. In a thrilling and heartbreaking finish the Rivermen won the relay and broke Oberlin's string of victories.

Conference Champs Run Unbeaten String to 31; Lose Last to Rochester

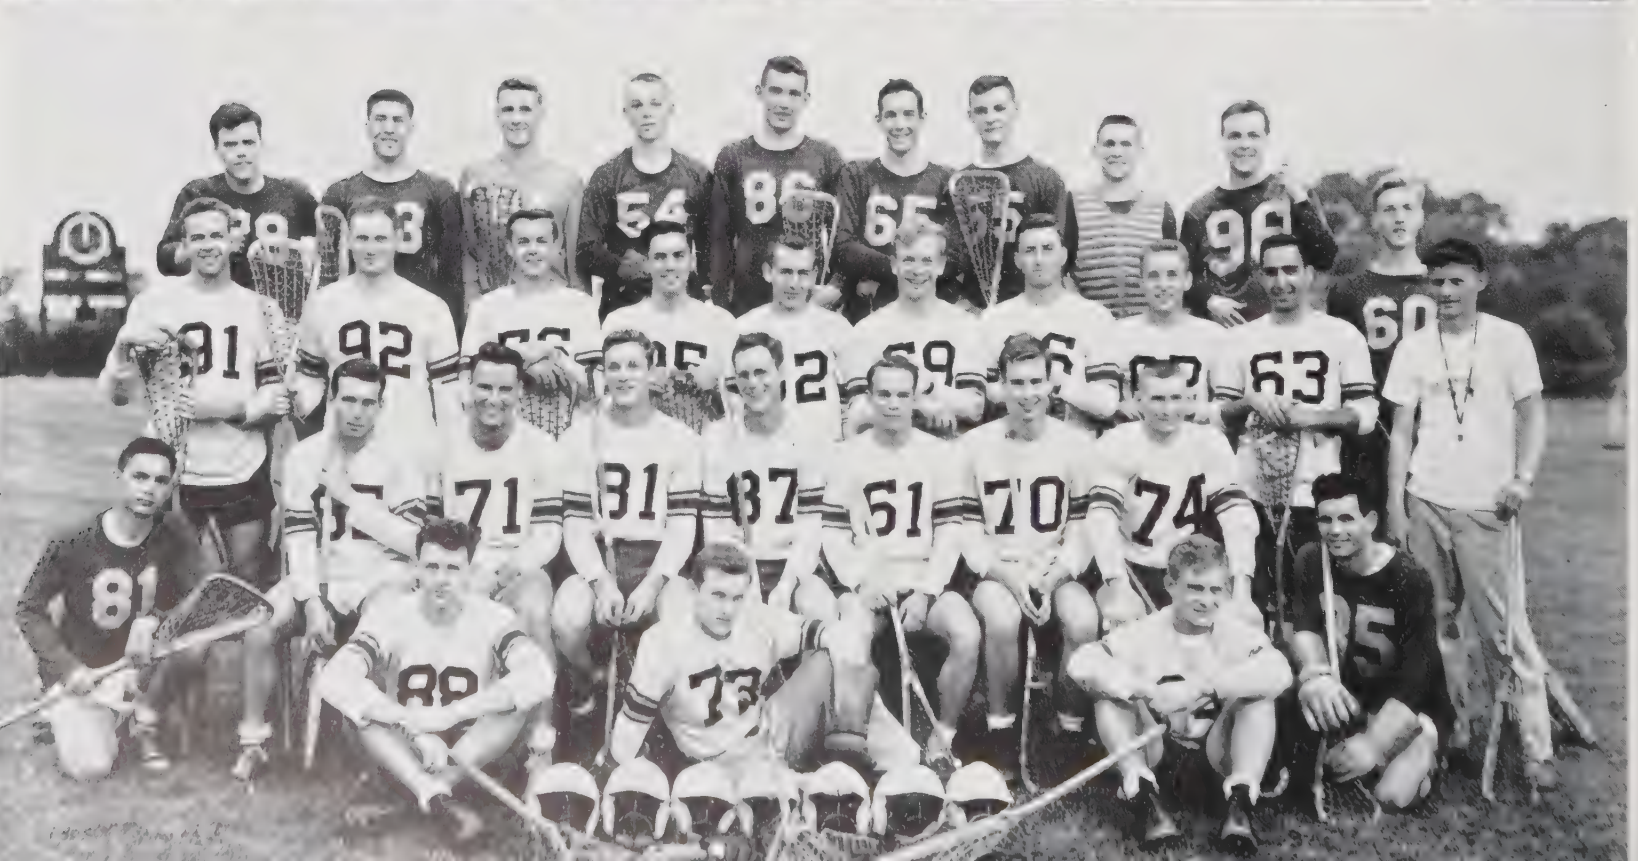

The Mermen breezed past the opposition in the first part of the season. Bob McDougal and Chuck Gorham were impressive, along with Ned Allen, Bob Trees, Bob Mayer, and Al Wadsworth. The diving, after a dismal early season outlook, turned out to be a bright spot. Senior Tom Palmer showed excellent form for his first year on the team as he and Bob Juckett provided the depth in that department. When Juckett transferred, sophomore John Gaeuman took over and gave Palmer stiff competition. Carter set a new Crane Pool record of 2:24.5 in the backstroke and Hunsicker lowered the breaststroke time to 2:30.5 in a close meet with Carnegie Tech, which found the Yeomen extended. Ohmann was pressed into emergency service in the 440, and he took a first with Staley right behind to insure victory. In the Conference preliminaries Hunsicker chopped his time to 2:27.5 for a new record; and with Ohmann and McDougal taking double wins and Carter, Staley, and Palmer adding points, the Mermen decisively continued their mastery over Conference foes.

Co-captain Glenn Carter touches the finish line in the 200-yard backstroke as manager Bob Cruickshank checks the time for the race.

Wins Conference Title

Winning ten matches and losing none, the 1950 Yeomen tennis team ran their victory string to 37 straight wins over a four-year period and brought home another Ohio Conference championship to Warner Gym. Ohio State and Kenyon furnished the toughest competition for the netmen as the other eight opponents fell relatively easily. Against the Buckeyes, Paul Veazey and Bob Blumenthal were the heroes as they won their doubles match to give Oberlin a last-minute 5-4 win. Against the Kenyon Lords, it was again team depth that won. The number one doubles team and the first and second singles lost, but Veazey, Blumenthal, and Dutch Wolff came through in the lower classes. Veazey and Blumenthal took the second doubles, 6-3, 6-0, to win the match, the last of the season and number 37 in the win column since the last defeat. The Butlermen won 19 out of a possible 20 matches in the Conference Meet to clinch the title, Oberlin taking 4 of the 5 singles titles and both doubles crowns.

TRACK

Oberlin's 1950 track team added another perfect season to Yeomen records with six wins and no defeats. Early in the season the distance events looked strong with expected weakness in the field and sprint events, but Coach Kinsey found the needed depth and strength in nine returning lettermen and a large group of sophomores. Senior Phil Thomas was the most consistent winner of the season, winning all the mile and half-mile events in which he participated.

In the triangular meet against Muskingum and Wooster, Tom Palmer broke the former school pole vault record of 12'8 $\frac{7}{8}$ " with a jump of 12'11 $\frac{5}{8}$ ". In the Conference meet held later in the season, Palmer set a new Conference mark with a 12'8" jump, erasing a record set in 1939. With the team in top-notch shape, victories came easily, but the meet at Ohio Wesleyan found Oberlin trailing their powerful opponents into the final events. With hard running and the help of Lady Luck, Oberlin won 64 $\frac{1}{3}$ -62 $\frac{2}{3}$ for the thriller of the year. Al LePontois' record 45'1" shot put broke the former school mark set by Sid Ward with a heave of 44'5 $\frac{1}{2}$ " in 1949. In the next meet, LePontois broke his own mark with a 45'4 $\frac{1}{2}$ " heave. Oberlin successfully defended its Ohio Conference Crown against twelve contending teams, taking firsts in six of the twelve events to score 56 points to 41 $\frac{1}{2}$ for Ohio Wesleyan, the nearest contender.

Thronermen Win 9, Lose 4 in 1950 Season

Don Marx won 6 games on the mound for the Yeomen during the 1950 season as the Thronermen batted their way to a record of 9 wins and 4 losses. This record gave the Yeomen the top spot in the Conference for all games played and second place after Ohio Wesleyan for Conference games only. After winning the opener on the wildness of the opposing pitchers, the team slipped, losing twice, but regained the win trail against Muskingum, blasting out 16 hits to win 12-2. Marx hit his stride against Kenyon, hurling a 2-hitter, and the following week, put down Wooster with 3 hits. Shortstop Robie Schults drove in 6 runs as the Yeomen avenged the early season loss to Wesleyan, beating the Bishops, 9-3. In the last game of the season on June 8, the Yeomen took a thriller from Baldwin-Wallace, 5-4. At the end of nine innings' play, the score was tied 4-4. The Yeomen scored once in the first of the tenth. In the Jackets' half, Marx saved the game, coming in as a relief pitcher with a man on third and no one out and retiring the side to end the game and the season for the Yeomen.

Karl Johnson lifts the ball high into the air to cut off a ninth inning rally.

Part-time Athletes Lose Fat, Frustrations

Bud Yenne of the "Old Men" tags the runner at the plate in a cloud of dust. 1950 was a very successful season for intramural softball as twenty-five teams participated in six leagues. South Noah, a freshman team, had the top record with seven wins and no defeats. The Theologs, East College, White House, and the Faculty topped the four upperclass leagues. Pete Bellows led the pitchers with two no-hit five inning games for East College.

Chuck McClintock of Dudley's sends the ball over the net as intramural volleyball nears the season's end. The faculty won the upperclass championship, beating West Burton and La-wall's in one night's work to take the crown. Center M. B. proved themselves to be the best of the freshman teams, beating A-Wing Federal for the title. Volleyball fills the period between touch-football and basketball in the intramural schedule and always attracts a large number of players.

Rich O'Neil and Chuck Murphy show their wrestling skill before their instructor, George Smith. Smith and Bob Mack ran the group, which met two times a week throughout the winter and put on several shows for the general public. A large number of men take part in intramural classes in wrestling, tumbling and apparatus, and boxing. Each class meets twice a week and puts on exhibitions periodically. Each of the three groups is working toward possible varsity status.

WAA Features House Participation Award

The WAA Board, led by president Ginny Talbot and composed of WAA officers and sports managers, planned the year's activities for WAA. The organization, which aims at promoting fun and good sportsmanship through athletics, instituted a Participation Cup, to be awarded to the house with the highest percentage of participation in marathon swimming, basketball, volleyball, and softball. The cup was donated by OC Club, an honorary athletic organization, presided over by Joan Schenck. Mrs. Galvin Fixx's speech, "A New Yorker Looks at Oberlin," highlighted the annual sports banquet, at which for the first time, fall sports plaques were awarded.

Talbot Scores As Army Downs Navy in 1-Goal Field Hockey Contest

For the eighth time in twenty-one years Navy defeated Army, on Saturday, November 11, in one of the most closely matched games in the history of the contest. Not until the last quarter did Ginny Talbot score the only goal of the game. Senior Talbot, who has played in Army-Navy for four years, has tallied the last three years. Following the Navy goal, Army recountered with a stronger offensive, but they were unable to score in the remaining time. Jane Maier, who played a fine defensive game, captained the Army team. Captain of the Navy team was Brig Solmitz, who looked outstanding at center halfback. Carol Leahey and Beverly Norfleet led cheers for Army, while Nancy Galajda and Charlie Shumard cheered on the victors.

Seniors Take Top in Hockey Tourney; Juniors Second

Accurate shooting and strong defensive play gained the seniors top honors in the class hockey tournament. Such stars as Peekie Stevenson and Brig Solnitz sparked the seniors' line-up. The juniors claimed second place with the help of Chile Child and Barbara Meyer. The sophs, led by center Sally Shipman, and the frosh, sparked by Willie Wilson, vied for third place and ended in tie position.

Modern Dancers Perform

Advanced and regular Modern Dance groups met once a week to prepare dances for a program in December and another one in April. Also included on the programs were dances by members of the freshman and sophomore modern dance classes.

Crimsons
Win in Volleyball

Class volleyball of 1950 ended with the sophomores on top, followed by the juniors. In the all-star game the Crimsons, captained by Marjorie Simons, vanquished the Golds of Marcia Shumaker. Fairchild and Pyle Inn won the house tournament, and the Whys beat the Wherefores.

Senior Basketball Team Has Perfect Record

Close games highlighted the class basketball season which was won by the seniors who came through with a perfect record of six wins and no losses. The freshmen placed second and were followed by the sophomores. Trudy Hess earned the highest total season score.

Yale Wins Y-P Tilt In 4th Quarter Spree

The Yale Bulldogs, captained by Peekie Stevenson, rolled up a fourth-quarter score that stretched their lead to a final total of 20-11 over the Princeton Tigers who were led by Captain Ginny Talbot. Careful ball-handling and good rebound work enabled the Bulldogs to control the game. However, until the last quarter the Tigers provided close competition. Marilyn Landis of the Bulldogs and Marge Roller of the Tigers took scoring honors with seven points each. Betty Baldwin and Sally MacIntyre each put in six points for Yale. In the Y-P song contest Dascomb snared first place with "Oberlin Lullaby," which featured a chorus in the round and a solo by Del Downs. "Raindrops Rhythm," sung by Webster girls dressed in slickers, won second place. In third place the judges ranked Tank's "Pedal Pushers" and gave "The Fighting O-Man" of Harkness honorable mention. During the halftime Y-P manager Jo Finley announced the selection of Cokie Chalmers as next year's Y-P manager. Ginny Talbot, WAA president, presented the Participation Cup for basketball to Webster, the house basketball championship plaque to Fairchild, and the class basketball championship plaque to the class of 1951.

Marge Diebolt of the Tigers jumps high to intercept a Bulldog pass from Ruth Lurie to Marge Meissner.

YALE TEAM: Ruth Lurie, Ginny Long, Peekie Stevenson, Marge Meissner, Betty Baldwin, Barb Meyer, Marilyn Landis, Ellie Hester, Sally MacIntyre, Trudy Hess, Mariel Gilbert.

PRINCETON TEAM: Mary Anne Morgan, Marge Roller, Ginny Talbot, Ann Bachman, Sally Mallory, Marge Diebolt, Bobby Litt, Nancy Nicalo, Julie Hail, Jackie Jones, Bif Fairbanks.

Marilyn Landis, who tied for top scoring honors, has just let go with a long shot for the Bulldogs.

Swim Show Features 9-Nation Cook's Tour

The 1950 synchronized swimming show, World Pool, featured a watery tour of nine foreign countries. Patricia Lewis and Mary Jo Bechtel narrated the story of two girls' trip abroad and what they saw in France, Austria, Norway, Persia, Scotland, Russia, China, Hawaii, and South America. The marathon swimming race was won by Arnold's this year.

Barrows-Johnson Captures House Softball Title

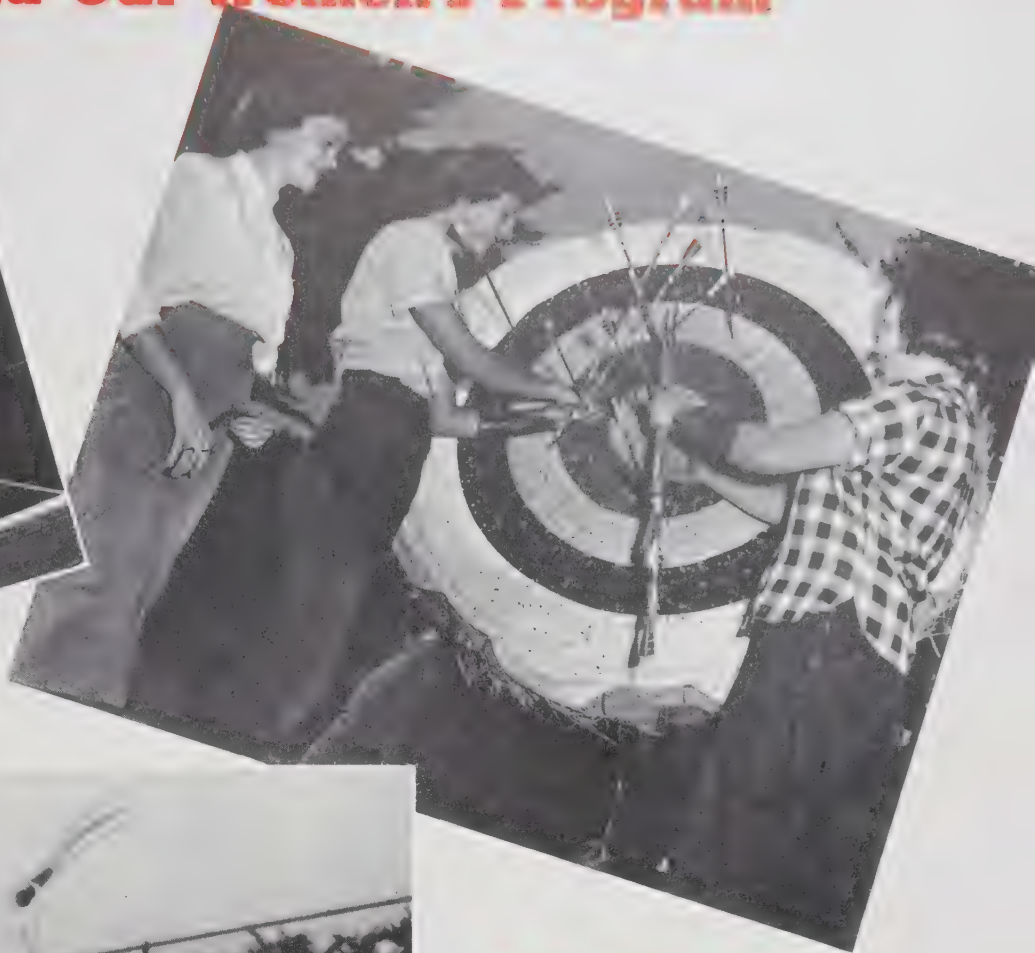

Betty Wells pitched the Barrows-Johnson softball team to an undefeated season and the house championship. In the final game between the champions of the two leagues, Barrows-Johnson overcame Elmwood-Pyle Inn, 12-10. The Stars defeated the Bars, 9-4, in the all-star game.

Individual Sports Round Out Women's Program

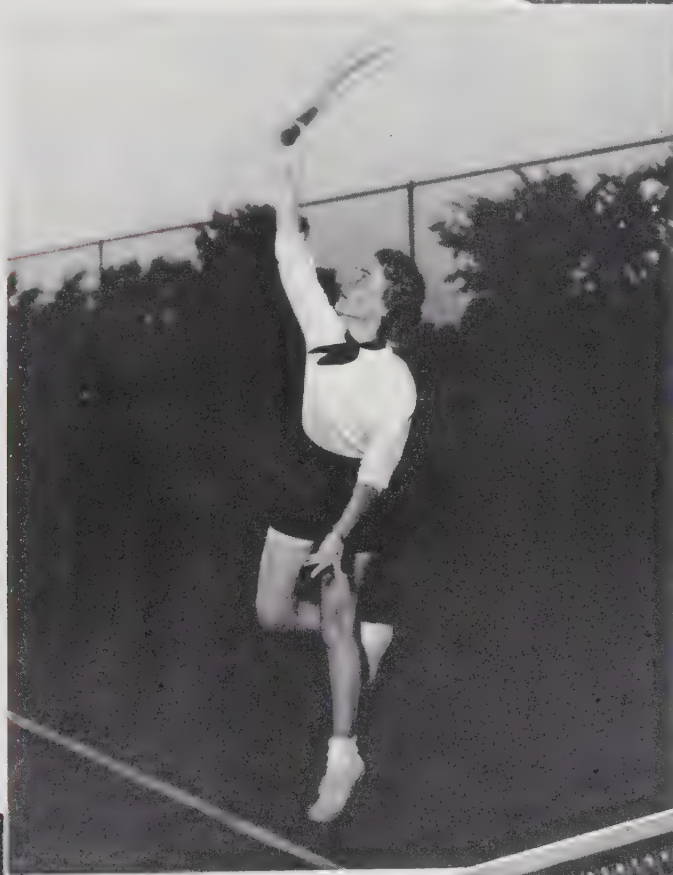

Claire Oaks and Mary Laub brush up on their ping-pong for the tournament in the winter.

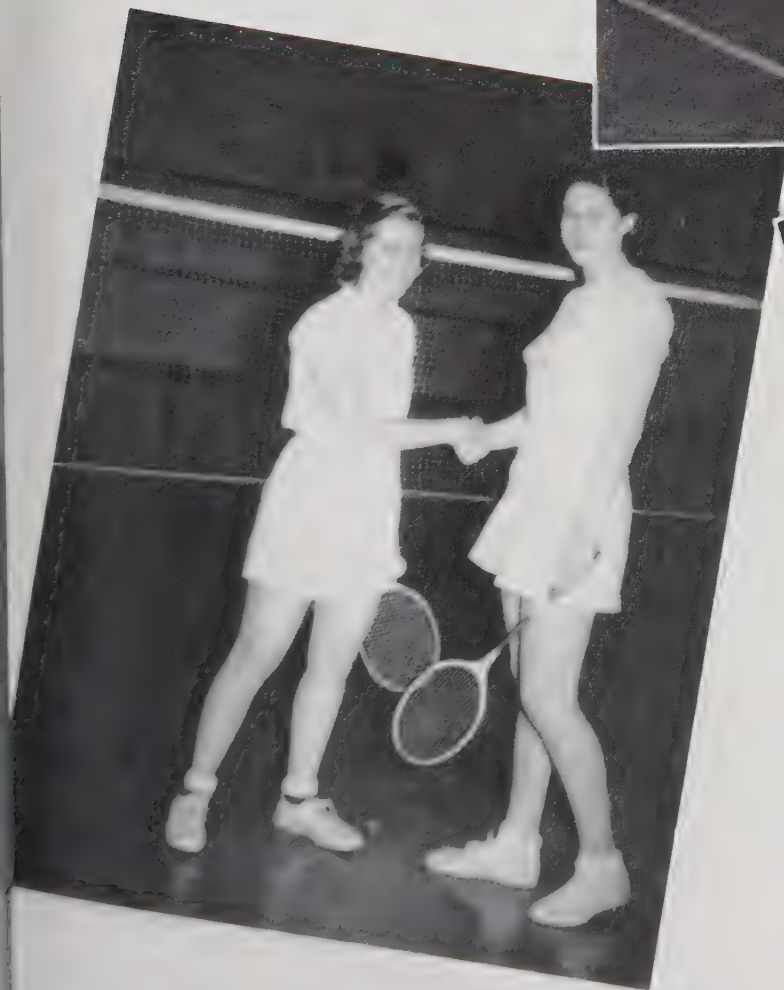

Maggie Nelson, Caroline Fraser, and Jean Nichols collect their arrows after a pre-tournament flight.

Cokie Chalmers serves one in the singles tennis tournament.

Marge Roller congratulates badminton champ Barb Meyer after their final match.

Mary Stickell bowls for Shurtleff in the house bowling tournament.

Pinups

Cokie Chalmers and Anne Britton get unpacked and settled in their new room, while Jeanette Palmer describes her summer.

Oberlin Septembers bring rain, happy merchants, and students. People get off busses, trains, and wrinkled raincoats, chewing a last chicken sandwich as they abandon the outside world. Dorms, booksellers, and professors receive steamer trunks, money, and students. Upperclassmen are careful to qualify hello-agains with: "Sure, you were at the Snack Bar last year when . . ." It's a safe bet he has been there even if you can't remember seeing him before!

"Just one thing more, girls—" Gerry Youngblood winds up a late house meeting at May Cottage. Dorm meetings are the time for planning future events.

The initial disappointment of a cold room and a cold roommate is forgotten when two freshman girls become amateur interior decorators.

Hardware and bookstores stock up bedroom and classroom supplies for returning students. Dick Litter realizes a college-provided 40-watt bulb won't do.

Paper Curtains Brighten Empty Rooms

Seen the second week in September, a dormitory room looks as if nothing but flies had lived in it since Peters was a gleam in an architect's eye. However, after a trip to the hardware and the dime store, preceded by a trip to the bank, a transformation takes place. You have curtains by Kleenex, pictures by Petty, and decor, of a sort, by degrees.

And if the lampshade is a bit garish, and the bedspread purple and green—no matter. They'll both be covered with dirty socks after two weeks.

Oberlin rooms are noisy—sometimes, and untidy—sometimes, but they certainly are comfortable. They fit like a glove.

Dick Drake's new room in M.B. becomes his home with a clutter of books, ashes, Ritz crackers, pin-up pictures and dirty laundry. He makes a start now.

Carting suitcases and boxes out of basement dust is the first aggravating September task. Jack Skow and Pete Mattson wrestle with a trunk as they move into Burton Hall.

Progress of Dining from Neolithic Era

Dining has progressed considerably, so the anthropologists tell us, since dawn men supped from the brain-pans of the recently deceased. At Oberlin it is a ritual, achieving as close an approximation of the atmosphere of home as an institution can. It includes pressed linen, table manners, and prayer—and it is coeducational.

Affected only slightly by this first year of renewed conflict, Oberlin's gracious standard of dining made one concession to austerity—it exchanged linen napkins for paper ones.

To Present, Results to Co-educational Meals

Day in the dining hall can be divided according to the clothes worn by diners. 7:00 A.M. finds the Oberlin early-bird, clad in pajama tops and dungarees, standing in line not for worms, but for Wheatena and biscuits. Lunch finds this same food-hound relatively unchanged, except for a sweatshirt thrown over the pajama top. The decree says informal, so informal it is. At dinner, though, he comes in full regalia: shirt, tie, and coat. Manners, too, have been polished for the evening meal; girls are helped to their seats, and salt is passed to them. But male and female are served equally, and knife each other equally in raffles.

Althea Davis, Marian Parry, Marianne Russell, Hope Griswold, Jane Taggart, and Helen Steere advertise their open house. Acts during meals amuse some, annoy others.

Mrs. Kerr serves thimblefuls of coffee following Sunday dinner at Dascomb. Demi-tasse time is time for socializing, so Noah housemother Mrs. Requa mixes with the mob of students.

Mixers Leave Students Well Homogenized

Operating on the plausible theory that during the long summer vacation Oberlin students have become adjusted to a more placid, non-academic existence, dorm social chairmen plan in the early fall events known as "mixers."

At these mixers, students have a chance to become acquainted or reacquainted with classmates, play parlor games and partake of demi-tasse, punch, or cocoa and thus have an opportunity to readjust to College social life. Dining hall mixers are not held in the winter or spring; perhaps the powers-that-plan feel that by this time students are thoroughly mixed. They're right.

Lord's mixer featured dancing, games, and extensive entertainment. Herb Henke fingers the keyboard, only to be drowned out by happy chanters and chanteuses.

During Orientation Week, mixers help to confuse or assimilate freshmen. At May Cottage Bob Kimball is running the show with antics that bewilder the newcomers.

Budd Hopkins and B. Tolman test their oral musculature by thrusting a piece of newspaper between straws, while level-headed John Seidensticker patiently anticipates his turn.

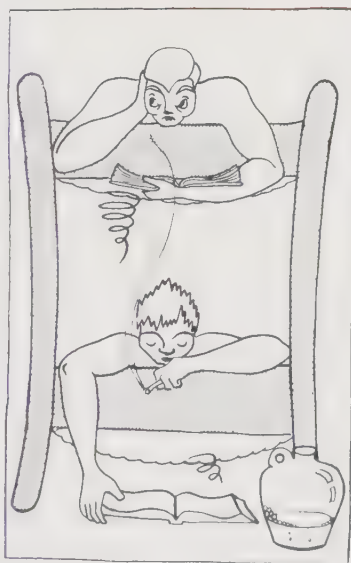

Bob Hanson and his accordion are always in demand for mixers, after-dinner entertainment, and Pool Hall parties. Baldwinites got a frequent sampling first semester.

Sunday dinner and dress change to weekday informality when the tables are cleared in Nancy Squire parlor. Trying to fit in both books and boys at one time is inefficient, and everyone knows which will take precedence.

Studying Students Fill Parlors, Landscape

With the bleak days of approaching winter come cold, leaden thoughts—thoughts of books and of study. There is no escape from these thoughts; they must be exorcised. And there are only two ways to do this: go Pool Hall, or go study. Most people, most of the time, choose the second alternative, and consequently the parlors, lounges, steps, hallways, libraries, lawns, offices, forests, bedrooms, beaneries, churches, dinner tables, and street-corners of the College are clogged and dotted with studying students.

Of all the “institutions” for which the College is famous—or infamous, studying is probably the most widely and least happily followed. Speculation goes that if one shook Carnegie Library by its stacks, researchers would tumble out who haven’t seen daylight since Alf Landon was a contender for the crown.

Co-ed studying is popular at Elmwood as at every dorm. Barbara Williams and Fred Ferre study notes in comfort.

When the oft-punctuated silence and worried faces make Libe studying difficult, Thelma Morris and Marge Diebolt try private quarters in May.

Some forms of studying cannot be done at the Libe. Practicing speeches is not appreciated there, so Gerry Youngblood emotes before two disinterested friends at May.

Does three-four meter conflict with four-four? Eurythmics class provides enervating homework for Gary Gordon. Barry Shank, and Ronnie Waln in the plush green hallways of M.B.

Dorm, Dining Hall Diversions Are Ideal

Oberlin's counterpart of the drugstore cowboy is the after-breakfast (lunch or dinner) parlor-lounger. He declares himself with comic-page, bridge deck, or "Reader's Digest," and is not averse to discussion with whomever he can catch. A study-addict, he specializes in growling at those who interrupt his French verb recitations, voices loud disapproval of the Libe reading room. Joe's occupational diseases are apparent in almost everyone, so he is conceded to be a good guy. At least his spinach is raffled and his zo notes are borrowed as often as the next fellow's.

Higher education descends to the funny papers Sunday noon. Anne Blackenburg and Pete McCorison catch up on the news in Grey Gables. Others play bridge and talk before the meal.

Zelda Dana, Gerry Speidel, Maria Lenhoff, and Mary Houck of Talcott have already been addicted to the Oberlin bridge habit. Jane DuBois, Frank Connor, and Bill Wallace kibitz.

Musicians of the Con don't have a chance at the Talcott piano, for any college student who can pound out a tune soon collects a crowd to sing folk ballads and current hits.

Pre-Christmas week is hectically filled with exams and packing; dallying in Baldwin after meals means yawning over books past twelve, but social life musn't be neglected!

Firm resolutions to work are forgotten with smoke and noisy argument as Tom Hayes, Bruce McWhorter, Gerry Humel, and Preston Plews "goof off" at Shepard's.

Who goes to beauty parlors? At Webster they cut their own. Margie Vieth trims Mary Laub's hair while Dottie McDonald and Dana Finnegan figure out "33 down."

For Killing Time, Solving World Ills

Ice cream, cake, and coffee put diets off till tomorrow. Gladys Beal shares her awaited food package from home with a few friends in May Cottage for the customary 10:15 spread.

Some eat, some study, some talk—these activities are combined at "spreads," and are later manifested in stomach aches, bluebook doldrums, and positive opinions. Bull session discussions evolve panaceas for world ills, but nighttime eloquence somehow disappears when the next morning's eight o'clock rolls around. Professors are notoriously unsympathetic to sleep-fogged though well-meaning students, and classmates complain when their fellows are too sleepy to help recite.

Much preparation always goes into dormitory displays for Homecoming. Sylvia Smith, Mary Laub, Jo Peck, Maggie Coon, and Claire Oaks help to make Webster a winner.

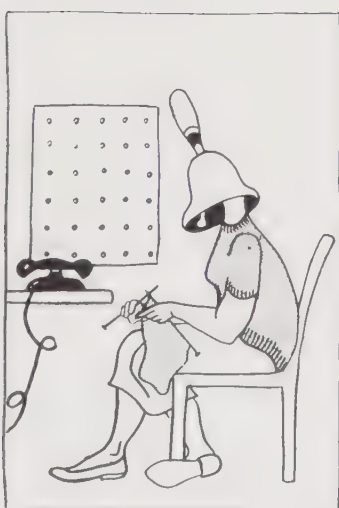

Tigers and more tigers. Allencrofters Jean Nichols, Helen Batten, Marty Bain, and Bobby Groth work frantically to finish their dorm's contribution to Homecoming.

High Spirits, Low Humor of Dormitories

Dormitory spirit is one of Oberlin's intangibles, which, thrust on all of us as incoming freshmen, remains for many of us a pleasant, convenient outlet for four years of social expression. At its best in the pastel, low-lit April atmosphere of a house formal; at its worst in the jaw-wide grin of the pinstripe youth who corners you with "fifty cents for house dues," dorm spirit is a creature of many forms.

In this diversity lies its worth—between the uncertain, community-sing atmosphere of a freshman dorm to the assured, not really objectionable sophistication of the glass and brick senior eateries there is room—and board—for almost everyone to dwell, if not in peace, at least in a congenial atmosphere. Nowhere a raucous, too-collegiate thing, dorm spirit manifests itself in Burton's buxom snow-maid, in the cosmopolitan quality of French House, the bridge-and-rhetoric of Cranford and the monastic, male disorder of Quadrangle.

Dorm spirit, in its most organized state, crops up every year in the papier-maché and pun Homecoming decorations. Harkness won the official nod this year with its representation of De Pauw's "Pawl Bearers" carrying their team to its final rest.

Manifested in Homecoming Decorations

Song, soap suds, and slogans dressed up Noble Cottage in the Homecoming contest.

The opponent always provides good inspiration for puns such as Tank displayed.

Railroad-minded Embassy made its bid for honors with a fire-belching engine.

The Harkness girls merited top honors in exhibiting both ingenuity and artistic skill.

Even General Shurtleff wants to "Shake De Pauw" of Shurtleff's big Homecoming Tiger.

A giant-sized counter highlighted Federal's elaborate decorations for Homecoming.

The grinning crowd in the parlor of Keep Cottage are never really as thirsty as they say, but sipping ginger ale punch helps as a conversation starter—or conversation avoider.

Making the rounds at Elmwood's open house eating popcorn, these three stop at Peg Twaddle's and Mary Tellner's room. Sunday open houses increase friendships and fill stomachs.

May Cottage turns European for open house as Marge Diebolt and Thelma Morris invite their friends into an atmosphere of the Pyrenees complete with native food.

Discouraged by the punch, Frank Connor substitutes by pouring grapefruit juice during the Elmwood open house. Upperclass dorms usually are less generous with food.

College Dorms Compete for Sunday Guests,

With popcorn, music, and people issuing from each room, the women (or men) hold open house. The atmosphere is festive. Sunday afternoons are livened with determinedly sparkling rooms, locked closets, and smiling housemothers. Proclamations cry the merits of Shurtleff vs. Webster, Burton vs. Noah, and the multitudes come. Open houses at Oberlin, institution-wise, are ancient, but originality keynotes the themes in the weekly battle for visitors. Professors don't often brave the crowds, but if that cute blonde from chem lab shows up, who cares!

Intramural Points in Inter-House Rivalry

Fairchild and May demonstrate their prowess on the basketball court. These two teams were tops of the house teams this year, though Arnold's won the annual swim marathon.

Eagerly enthusiastic, non-players like these May and Webster girls intently watch their teams. Excitement runs high during these contests, as all is forgotten in the frenzy of the moment.

Dick Curtis sends the ball over for Peabody's as Frank Stephens of the Center Burton team leaps to tap it. Men's Intramural sports can be as rough as Varsity, too, as any tough footballer will admit.

Co-op

Save

Pyle Inn Co-op is unmatched in Oberlin for its esprit-de-corps, its informality, and the amateur status of its junior cooks.

An innovation this year, there can be no question that Pyle Inn is a successful one. In the first semester of operation this student-run cooperative startled the rest of the College by announcing a 50 per cent saving on board and room bills. By February a large part of the student population was thinking, tentatively, in terms of expanding Pyle Inn facilities, and opening new co-op dormitories.

Bob Woodruff, Al Goodwin, and Jurgen Boll cause leaves to quit the creeping bent lawn in front of the Co-op house.

Marcia Newell and George Rawick help Mrs. Thompson make southern cornbread in the kitchen.

The learning and labor motto at work: Sheila Goldberg cajoles vacuum cleaner. Ann Lodge reads L. Ron Hubbard to Trotsky, the Pyle Inn cat.

Dorm Money

Work is the keynote of the Co-op; work in buying, planning, and managing, and work at unexecutive, unromantic, unskilled labor. The regime isn't too harsh, however—a look at the parlor tells that. Five hours a week per student takes care of the chores.

Probably the most active, and reactive dorm, politically, Pyle Inn hears a wide assortment of views in its after-dinner discussions. The prevailing political wind is liberal, in keeping with cooperative tradition. "Joe Hill," for instance, is sung at least as often as "Down the Street."

Al Goodwin and Pussy Lee do-si-do as applauders Mort Tabin, Art Wolfe, Ruth Searles, and Bill Willmott stamp feet.

Art Sasahara provides a bowl of diced beets to entourage of Hallowe'en revelers exalting famous chef Boy-ar-dee.

Knitting needles clash, faces contort, teeth gnash, as Joe Welty proffers Co-op by-laws at Sunday evening meeting.

For Mr. and Mrs. Hayward, the real homework comes at meal time. With a hungry son, the deadline can't be extended. Schoolwork starts after they kiss baby goodnight.

He may be offering energetic assistance, but Mother and Father Mallet keep hopping every minute with a lively son. Domestic life is a full time extra-curricular activity.

Botany Lane: Baby Goes to College, Too

Woman's work is done a little faster if a helpful husband joins in dish-drying. Jeanie and Buck Polster seem to enjoy this permanent board job, become a family affair.

Botany Lane is the symbol of a nebulous future to some; to inhabitants, a tangible statement of immediate reality. Once-white beaverboards stand firm to children, dogs, and grocery boys, as the well-used trailers give another year of "emergency service." No sidewalks bridge the mudseas of each fall and spring, but G.I. shoes are fairly waterproof, and Junior can play inside.

Private Dorms Boast Select Crew, No Showers

How to get away from it all and still stay within bike-trot of Peters is demonstrated every year by those upperclassmen who desert Noah and Burton for the comparative quiet of the private house. "Small but select" is the motto, and for many it takes the place of large dorm showers, panelled lounges, and noise. Private houses get their clientele from displaced sophomores—those who drew blanks in the room lottery. Each year a number find they like the life, and stay in exile throughout college.

Marian Adams is the excited bystander as Ruth Takakura rushes through a May Cottage hall to answer the phone.

Glenn Koenig's broad smile should mean an enthusiastic "yes" coming from the girl at the other end.

Counselors serve even as gentlemen's gentlemen. Here Toby Tobias helps Jack Hilberry get ready.

Dorm Social Seasons

As winter approaches, the upperclass formal dances begin the formal season which continues until after springtime, when each of the freshman dorms has a formal. A few of the larger dorms, notably Talcott, May, and Fairchild, have enough floor space in their dining halls to hold their own formal dances. But the remainder of the women's dorms and all of the men's dorms hold their formals—the smaller dorms often hold theirs jointly—either in Warner Gym or in the M. B. auditorium. The women's dorms, either out of modesty or cunning, usually vote non-corsage. The men's dorms, on the other hand, are a bit more generous toward the ladies and often vote for corsage formals.

Although a formal is basically the same as any other dance, the atmosphere is different. Perhaps it comes from time spent in preparation, Dressing for a formal is half the thrill. Mary Callison helps Nancy Mitchell with the important finishing touches.

The time is now. Gerry Raap's buzz will hurry his date downstairs. Parks Campbell stands second in line.

The night is young and there's a dance in the offing. These couples leaving Cranford get coveted 12:30 pers.

Feature House Formals

slowness of Jack Melick's music, thirty minutes added to the girl's per, and occasionally the corsage included in the cost of a bid.

Once the date is set for a formal, the telephone is the key factor in the success of the dance. Whether dates are arranged a month, a week, or a day before the formal, negotiation is usually done via phone. Phoning dates has become easier since dials and an automatic five-minute shut-off mechanism have been incorporated into the system. After the dates have been made, the problem of dressing is no small matter, and it often requires the help of roommates or friends. Then the buzz of the call system, the leisurely walk, the soft music, crepe trimmings, and glittering punch bowls. Low lights and taffeta work a pleasant change in a girl, a change that makes the shoe-shine, the press-job, and the posy worthwhile.

Snow, Bull Sessions Preferred to Planned Fun

Homecoming, intramurals, and formals may be synonymous with dorm life for some, but different manifestations are better remembered by others. Social Chairmen of the houses are dedicated to prodding people into signing up for splash parties, hayrides, parties in Goodrich, or co-educational volleyball matches. Some of these organized events fold from inertia, but spontaneous movements always meet with success. Snowball fights between dorms, caroling at Christmas time, and square-dancing after meals take little planning, but produce a maximum of happy people. Even impromptu bull sessions by the bell desk can brighten an interlude between studies and studies.

After the tables and chairs have been cast aside, Fairchild's basement is a maelstrom of humanity. With clamorous whoops from the sidelines, Fairchild coterie whirls a frenzied roundelay among the pillars.

TOP LEFT: At Noble's tree-trimming party Gus Potter and Ruth Lurie hang ornaments as Bobby Litt, Ginny deVyver, and Marty Doudna concentrate on untangling boxes of decorations and tinsel.

TOP RIGHT: The lady of Burton, eight feet high, even rated an article in the Plain Dealer. All that snow lying around was too good to be wasted, so the snow woman was created.

BOTTOM: Eleven people look aghast as camera invades their hayride privacy. Sweet nothings are being whispered, theories of government propounded; the driver is worrying about his guppies.

The charge of narrowness has often been raised by the uninformed against college communities. The Oberlin faculty refutes this, for the staff participates in many activities other than classroom duties.

The typical professor is writing a book. He is called upon to help govern the college, must give advice to anxious students, and occasionally make chapel speeches.

He contributed more to entertainment on campus this year. Phinnies Phollies and the Stagaroo would not have been complete without their faculty skits. MU, G&S, and ODA had faculty directors.

Besides entertaining others, he entertained himself. Profs hiked, bowled, played volleyball, handball, and badminton. And they held parties, from formal receptions to square dances.

Mr. Barr and President and Mrs. Stevenson stand in the receiving line at the party given in the Art building to welcome new faculty members and their wives.

Formal attire, candlelight, and flowers add atmosphere to the faculty reception. Pru Harwood and Maren Hansen serve Professor Cremeans.

An important part of musical life in the Conservatory is the faculty recital. Nathan Gottschalk, David Robertson, Irene Robertson, and John Frazer take their bows.

Everyone is fascinated by a fire. Richard Myers, Thomas Harris, Edward Bosworth, and Dean Holdeman, no exceptions to the rule, bask in the ruddy glow of the freshman bonfire.

Prof's Govern, Entertain, As Well As Teach

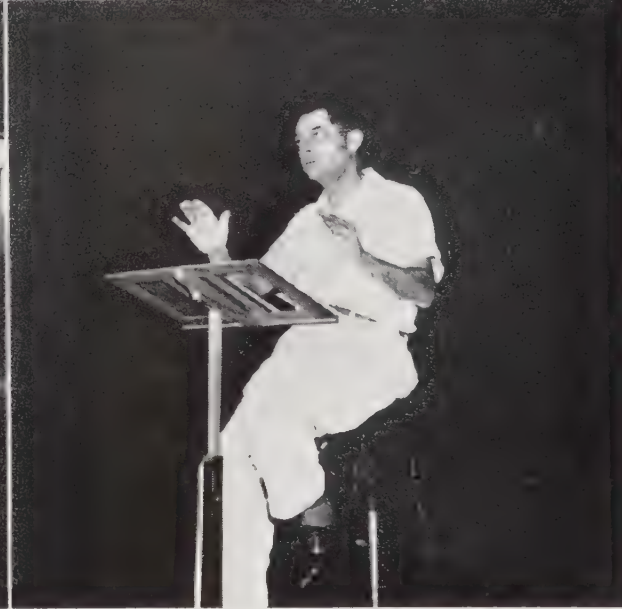

Dean Dolliver's vigorous playing is always in demand when she visits the various dorms during the course of the year.

J. J. Auer enunciates clearly at the basketball game while his son watches dubiously.

Paul Arnold, foil in hand, demonstrates the thrust and parry to the fencing team.

Maurice Kessler rehearses the Musical Union in a difficult passage of Handel's Messiah.

Extracurricular Profs Have Varied Duties

Stogie and mortarboard lend the proper air of rakishness to Professor Edward Mattos, in his impersonation of Groucho Marx at Phinnies Phollies.

Also performers in Phinnies Phollies, Dean Robertson, Professors Gottschalk and Mattos really got dozens of decibels out of their undersized instruments.

Mr. Grigg Fountain and his wife obey Mr. Singleton's command to "round that couple and take a little peek!" at the Faculty Square Dance Club whoop-de-doo in Rec Hall.

The Graduate School of Theology had the largest enrollment in its 115 year history when 125 students representing 21 Protestant denominations plus zen Buddhism registered for courses in the Fall term of 1950-51. Eight of these were women and nine were foreign students from Germany, Nigeria, Canada, Hawaii, and Japan.

An international touch was present all year; at parties, bull-sessions, assemblies, and in the classrooms. The two German students had been in the German army during World War Two, and the student from Japan had been in Tokyo during its initial bombing by the Americans.

The year 1950-51 had many highlights for everyone. Highlight of the Seminary's social season was its Christmas family party which was modeled after a German Christmas celebration. However, the festival included a few Americanized touches. Highlight of the athletic interests was the winning of the intramural football championship. Highlight of the revitalized Seminary Union was the adoption of a new constitution after a four-year delay. But the highlight for most of these Christian clergymen was the combined caring for family, church, and school work all at the same time.

Shown below are the Fleming, Cook, and Kapoo families who share living quarters at the Antlers, one of several Seminary family groups living in Oberlin. Over half the Seminary students are married.

Church, Studies

Students in the Graduate School of Theology spend part of each week in some type of field work: Glenn Shoun, pastor of the Oberlin First Baptist Church, is shown conducting a Communion service with two of his Deacons assisting.

Preaching, full or part time, is a week-end task of most Theologs. Here Mary Grubbs practices next week's sermon before Dr. King's homiletics class.

Ministering to the sick and aged is another activity in the life of the ministerial student. Thurman Coss chats with a patient at the Allen Hospital before reading Scripture and offering prayer. Work with children and young people, community projects, weddings, funerals, and baptisms are all in the week's work for Theologs.

atmosphere and refreshments Rec Hall was the scene of this gaiety.

February, March, and May were months of senior activity. On February 10 the CRD Stageroo featured class skits. The seniors tried to take the trophy for the third consecutive time. The class played April Fool at the junior-senior sponsored April Fool's Eve Masquerade. At intermission, after the fashion of masquerade balls, the revelers unmasked, and prizes were awarded for the best costumes. At their picnic on May 13 seniors ate, sang, and conserved their energy for the coming final exams.

The class of '51 was tearful at the Senior Prom on June 7; it was happy and carefree at the thought of no more bluebooks, seminar reports, recitals, labs, and really began to "shoot for the moon" in keeping with the theme: "Moonlight Sonata."

Juniors: Class of 1952

After a month of incidental socializing and some not-so-incidental studying, the juniors revived the Old West spirit with the first All-College formal of the year. Jack Melick's band provided its usual danceable music. On the night of October 28 Warner Gym became a Wild West town, complete with livery stable, ten-gallon hats, "the face on the bar-room floor," people, and shouts of glee. Gold nuggets (homemade in Oberlin) were exchanged for punch and cookies at Rec Hall during the intermission.

The night before the Oberlin-Wooster football game, the juniors sponsored a pep rally in front of Finney Chapel. The famed faculty cheerleaders led the students in cheering the 1950 football team to victory. Oberlin won the next day, beating Wooster 52 to 2.

A masquerade party in March combined the talents of juniors and seniors. Prizes were awarded for those costumes most a propos to the theme, April Foolishness.

The Junior Prom on April 28 and a spring party climaxed the social activities of the Class of '52. But it ended the year by saying farewell, happy times, good luck, and fair weather to the seniors at the "Moonlight Sonata." And as newly-arrived seniors, the class asked itself, "What'll I be doing next year at this time . . . ?"

Janet Fossenkemper and Larry Cohen ride Bessie at the Allegheny game. Cohen is getting his date early for "The Stirrup." Bill Thurber adds his touch.

Those who attended "The Stirrup" will recognize decorations "straight from the Old West." The artists here are Jean Hazeltine, Kate Pusey, Jeanne Alter, and Nancy Cole.

Juniors Give Year's First Formal

The lavish entertainment presented during intermission of "The Stirrup," the first All-College formal of the year, received much applause from the crowds of dancers gathered before the Asbestos Curtain. Starr Kopper is performing.

In spite of minority objections, the sophomore class began the year in the usual manner—Hell Day, a bonfire and a pajama-run. Soph muscle-squads outfought the frosh in the traditional inter-class riots, and collected a string of pants which stretched almost to the 50-yard line at the September 30 football game. And on women's Hell Day "Lots of legs" was the comment most often heard.

On October 15 the class was called together for "Pow-wow" by president Rog Michael. Low-flying rainclouds

Sophomore Sabra Chambers doles food—hot dogs, Fritos, apples, milk and doughnuts—to waiting food-hounds at the sophomores' first party. Rain, forcing a change in plans, moved the picnic from the Arb to Rec Hall. "Better this way," said one soph. "No ants, no walking."

Sophomores Squat Together In Rec

Food-eager sophomores gather in Rec Hall, wring rain out of their levis, curse the weather, but enjoy the food, dancing and entertainment at "Powwow," advertised "from 5 p.m. till . . ."

forced a change of plans, and this outing, planned for the Arb, was changed to Rec Hall. "Sophomore Day" at the November 4 game was similarly dampened.

The unexpected Thanksgiving vacation made it necessary to cancel the Soph-Senior Christmas formal planned for December 16. Trying a second time, the class of '53 succeeded this time with the traditional Banner Dance, held March 3 in Warner Gym. Featured at this dance was the initial display of the maroon-and-white class banner.

Successful in '50, and back for a repeat in '51, the soph street dance was held May 19 on the steps of Finney Chapel.

Freshmen: Class of 1954

"ONE-nine-five-four, ONE-nine-five-four." The chant rose sonorous into the night. Flamelight wavered hot on the half-naked bodies reeling mindless around the ceremonial fire.

The figures staggered faster, beating themselves and gasping. At a signal from the leader the line broke and the figures filed off into the encircling gloom. A little child on the edge of the crowd watched, and wondered, and wished he could be eighteen and a college boy.

Thus began the '50 frosh run, which was won after several long, cold miles by Peter Schultz and Jack Fenner. The class of '54 survived its tour through the Ohio countryside, because the next day at the Hamilton football game the freshmen pulled harder and won the frosh-soph tug-of-war. The sophs had collected more pants, though, and so everyone was happy. Injured frosh took up the cry: "There's always next year!"

The costume of the frosh men was picturesque: suitcoats, bathing trunks and shoepolish numerals on hairy legs. Their duties to sophs ranged from shoe shining to shining shoes.

Hell day for women this year was primarily a spectator-sport, at least as far as the thousand-odd males who watched proceedings were concerned. The chief innovation was the mode of dress ordained by the soph women. Briefly, it was this: on the head, pigtails; on the body, gym-suit; on the feet, high-heels; and on the legs, stockings and the rapt gaze of all men in sight. One misanthropic male at the Review office remarked: "Never seen so many knock-knees in my life." His was a minority view. At a style show held on Hell Day by frosh dorm chaplains, Diane Morgan was judged "Best-Dressed Female of '54."

By December 2 the frosh felt enough at home to hold the "Fifty-Four Forte." "Futuristic Occupations" was the theme, and the festivities were held at Hales Gym. After the songs, relays, and entertainment, the garbage collectors, saucer flyers, and Dixie Cup washers deployed to Rec Hall for refreshments. Two spring parties wound up the year for the freshman class, which by this time had gotten "on the social ball."

Dress-up day for the Freshmen means polishing sophomore shoes, bowing low.

Unidentified soph girl gets "low bumps" at 5:30 a.m. Men's Building serenade.

Class of '54 "rookies" show up in gym suits, rolled stockings and pigtails.

Frosh and sophs battle in front of Men's Building; exchange breeches, bruises.

Marion Thayer displays lace pants she won for having "most beautiful frosh legs."

From the Staff

We on the Business Staff wish to express our thanks to those many groups who, through their cooperation and good will, have made our work most pleasant. Very early in his college career, the student's association with Oberlin businessmen becomes an integral part of his daily life; their friendly interest is appreciated from Freshman Week through Commencement. In keeping with this spirit, we of the 1951 Hi-O-Hi urge you to patronize the Hi-O-Hi advertisers.

YOCOM BROTHERS

For over forty years Yocom's has served the students by meeting their needs throughout their college careers. Here students find everything from gym suits to yard goods, from gay percales to cover orange crates to chic, up-to-date fashions and accessories, and from stuffed mascots to luscious Botany yarns for sweaters.

*I*f the standing of a college were to be based on the kind of men and women it turns out, Oberlin would take its place in the top bracket of the fine educational institutions of the country. The quality of its scholarship has exerted a profound influence among men of letters, statesmen, lawyers, doctors, and teachers. The Ann Arbor Press therefore takes pride in its association with the students of Oberlin in the production of this book. It is uplifting and inspirational to contact and work with a student body whose ideals and college spirit demands workmanship of the highest class and the production of a book which stands as representative of the high purposes of the College itself. We hope our work for Oberlin College can continue as the generations come and go and as the College grows greater in service and usefulness to the people of Ohio and to the world at large.
